UNMISSABLE TV IN ONE SUBSCRIPTION

Sky Stream combines Sky TV and Netflix to bring you the world's biggest shows, from Succession to Black Mirror

If there's one drawback to this golden age of TV we're living in, it's the number of apps and channels we need to use to keep up with it all. Indeed, there's probably been at least one occasion recently when your friends have been raving about a show you haven't seen because you don't have a particular subscription.

But conversations like that are exactly what Sky Stream is designed to stop. For £26 a month, you can get Sky TV and Netflix together in one subscription, allowing you to access the very best shows from both platforms in one place.

With the new Sky Stream box there is no need for a satellite dish either, just plug in to any TV and connect to any wi-fi and away you go. Better still, whether you're looking for searing drama, laugh-out-loud comedy or exhilarating sports documentaries, there's plenty to choose from.

Everyone's talking about...

It feels like everywhere you go right now, Succession is the word on people's lips, and for good reason. The world has been transfixed by the ruthless, potty-mouthed chicanery of the Roy family and its media empire since the very beginning, underpinned by powerhouse performances from Brian Cox, Jeremy Strong, Kieran Culkin, Sarah Snook and Matthew Macfadyen. With the story having reached its shocking climax, you can watch the final season four on Sky now.

At the end of this month, you can get stuck into the third season of Netflix fantasy The Witcher, starring Henry Cavill as mutated monster hunter Geralt of Rivia. Also, season six of Charlie Brooker's thrillingly dark Black Mirror is new to Netflix – it boasts a sparkling cast list including Salma Hayek, Michael Cera, Aaron Paul, Josh Hartnett and Zazie Beetz.

Looking ahead, the sixth and final season of The Crown is due to be released on Netflix later this year. So, now's the time to discover the award-winning series. Inspired by historical events, it dramatises the story of Queen Elizabeth II and the political and personal events that shaped her reign.

Make a drama of it

We've seen both Sky and Netflix dramas take the globe by storm in recent years. Take Sky exclusive The Last of Us, for example. Based on the popular 2013 video game, this post-apocalyptic drama has made megastars out of Pedro Pascal and Bella Ramsey, whose characters Joel and Ellie must struggle across a pandemic-ravaged United States without falling prey to its zombie-like victims.

You can enjoy the glistening glamour and intrigue of both series of The White Lotus on Sky too, with standout performances from Aubrey Plaza and Jennifer Coolidge. And if that's not enough drama for you, over on Netflix you can watch Anya Taylor-Joy's journey to international chess superstardom in the award-winning series The Queen's Gambit.

Haven't watched Stranger Things yet? Well, you now have four seasons of heart-stopping – and heart-warming – supernatural adventures with Mike, Eleven, Will, Dustin, Lucas and the gang to look forward to before the next exciting season drops on Netflix.

Keep the laughs coming

Sky Stream is also sure to put a smile on your face, with new releases such as Netflix's action comedy FUBAR, starring Arnold Schwarzenegger and Monica Barbaro as a wise-cracking father-daughter duo. They're both secretly embedded in the CIA, but how long can they hide that from each other before all hell breaks loose?

The funnies don't stop there, with Ricky Gervais's hilarious yet poignant After Life and new black comedy drama BEEF, based on a traffic incident-sparked feud that goes out of control. Both are available on Netflix.

On Sky, you can sip a cosmo and find out all the latest gossip from the New York social scene again with Carrie, Miranda and Charlotte in And Just like That..., including the freshly released second season available now. While back in the UK, join Freema Agyeman and Lily Allen in sun-kissed Margate, with family comedy Dreamland.

Or, why not find out what high jinks occur when two of the nation's favourite comedians infiltrate the England squad in the build-up to Qatar 2022? Season five of Rob & Romesh Vs reveals all. You can also look forward to the boys taking on Crufts, Vegas, classical music and more.

Your favourite sports, up close

Wimbledon is upon us, and you can get to know some of its main players off court, including last year's finalists Nick Kyrgios and Ons Jabeur, in Netflix documentary Break Point. And with cycling's premier event kicking off in July, you can meet the riders in Tour de France: Unchained, plus get inside the high-octane world of the F1 paddock in Netflix smash hit Formula 1: Drive to Survive.

If that's not enough sport for you, allow Sky to take you back to that glorious day of triumph at Wembley last summer with Lionesses: How Football Came Home. You can also relive all the majesty and mythology of a Formula 1 icon in Asif Kapadia's endlessly moving documentary Senna.

From the Editors

It's THAT TIME of year again, when television resounds to the thwack of ball on racket and genteel applause, occasionally bubbling over into bouts of frenzied excitement when the drama heightens as surely as the shadows lengthen in the London postcode of SW19.

There is something rather comforting about the rituals of watching Wimbledon, reminding us that players may come and go, but some things never change. Draw the curtains against the afternoon sun and watch the action unfold. But who to follow?

We asked Tim Henman and Annabel Croft to mark your card with their pick of the men and women to watch. And on page 18 the BBC's tennis correspondent Russell Fuller goes in search of the motivation behind defending men's champion Novak Djokovic's seemingly unstoppable drive. We also hear from Clare Balding, who will be stepping into the role of main presenter this year.

Of course, not all of you will be tennis fans and, in the knowledge that any evening show on the BBC could fall victim to the whims of the schedulers, perhaps you'll be looking elsewhere for your entertainment. In which case, you might like to try Irvine Welsh's Crime on ITV1. If gritty drama is your thing, we think you will enjoy it. Read our interview with the author on page 28.

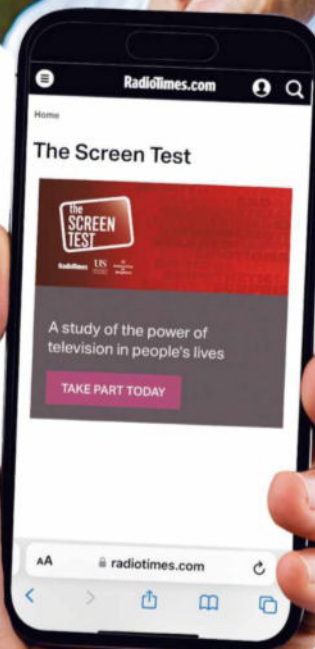

Finally, this is the last week in which you can take the Screen Test, the survey we are running with our partners at the Universities of Sussex and Brighton. So far 20,000 of you have responded, but if you haven't yet lent your voice don't miss out on this chance to join in – see page 9 for details. The more people take part, the louder we can shout about the findings – and the more impact they will have on those who make our TV.

LAST CHANCE TO HAVE YOUR SAY

There are just days left for you to take part in The Screen Test, the UK's most important and wide-ranging viewer survey – together we can shape the future of TV!

Television is the biggest, most exciting medium in the world today. But in all the noise around programmes and personalities, one voice is rarely heard: that of the viewer. Which is why we recently launched the Screen Test with our partners at the Universities of Sussex and Brighton. This unique survey must close on 7 July, so this is your last chance to get involved and have your opinions heard.

As we went to press with this issue, nearly 20,000 readers had already responded to what will surely be the biggest mass-participation survey ever undertaken of television viewers in the UK.

What was the last programme you watched? How did it make you feel? Those are just two of the questions we'd like you to answer in a questionnaire that allows you to tell us the kind of TV you enjoy and what it means to you, as well as looking at how you choose to watch it.

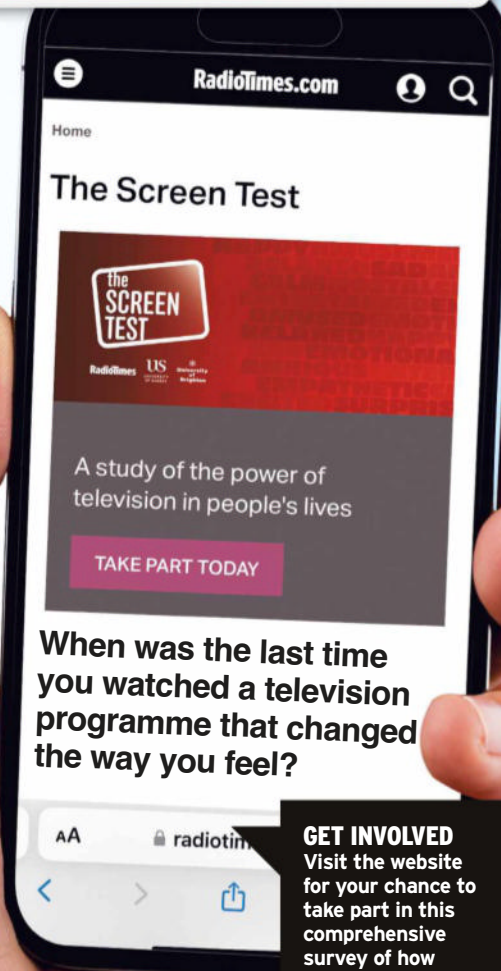

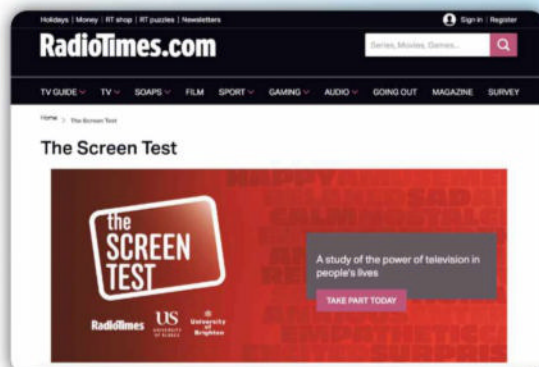

We hope that the results will provide the TV industry with a comprehensive picture of what the public wants to watch – and why. And that way, they will make more of the programmes that you choose to watch.

To take part in the survey, just go to thescreentest.org and tell us how you really feel about the television you watch. The more responses we receive, the more significant the results.

The questionnaire takes approximately 20 minutes to complete. Once you have started the survey you can pause at any time and return later to finish, although you can't amend your answers once you've completed it.

We will announce the preliminary results on 28 September, when we will be marking our 100th anniversary at the BFI on London's Southbank.

We look forward to hearing from you!

HOW TO TAKE PART

- ☐ Go to thescreentest.org to answer the survey
- ☐ It takes approximately 20 minutes to complete
- ☐ Survey closes on 7 July. The results will be announced on 28 Sept at the BFI Southbank

The study is designed for adults aged 18 or over. Your responses are confidential and we do not collect any identifiable information such as your name, email, address or IP address.

The Screen Test is led by a team of researchers at the Universities of Sussex and Brighton, in partnership with Radio Times.

Best known as Prince Albert to Jenna Coleman's Queen in ITV's Victoria, Tom Hughes, 38, has popped up in everything from Sky's A Discovery of Witches to Hugo Blick's The English. In new film The Laureate, he plays celebrated poet and author Robert Graves, who forms a ménage à trois with his wife Nancy (Laura Haddock) and free-spirited poet Laura Riding (Dianna Agron) before saying, and writing, Good-Bye to All That.

Did you know anything about Robert Graves and his exotic love life before you filmed this?

I broadly knew about him as one of the First World War poets, along with Wilfred Owen and Siegfried Sassoon, but it was his struggle postwar, his battle to find himself again, that I found fascinating. He's a mercurial talent and I like to find characters where I can dive into their psyche a bit and embrace the challenge of exploring their contradictions – the grey areas of life that we brush under the carpet.

How long have you been deep in Graves's psyche?

I met [director William Nunez] for a conversation about it in 2008, and then when I was shooting the first series of Victoria in around 2015, he reached out. For whatever reason, I stayed in his mind, and we finally shot it in January 2020.

Julian Glover, who has a small role, is Robert Graves's godson. Did he share any family gossip?

I actually met him years ago – when I left drama school, Julian came to a show of mine, so it was great to work with him. He took one look at me when I was backlit and said I looked just like Robert, but when the light came back on he wasn't so sure! He's a very nice guy and had awesome stories about Robert.

You've played a number of real-life figures, including Prince Albert in Victoria and Kit Marlowe in A Discovery of Witches. What sort of research do you do?

With Albert, I researched about him as a person, but with Robert, it was more about reading his work, as his human side was so delicately crafted in the story. His

TEN QUESTIONS WITH

TOM HUGHES

Victoria's Albert on his new love triangle, playing musicians – and the Bond rumour mill book The Future of Swearing and Improper Language helped me find his rhythms and his cadence – William likened him to John Lennon, with his sometime acerbic tone. But I only read up to where we find him in the film, where he's had a degree of success but not the household name we know today – he hadn't yet written Goodbye to All That or I, Claudius.

Having seen you play Ian Dury's bandmate Chaz Jankel in Sex & Drugs & Rock & Roll, you'd make a good John Lennon...

John Lennon has been dangled as a carrot a couple of times, but I'm not 21 any more! Although I've played guitar since I was about five and I still play and write songs every day. There's actually a possible film in the works where I'm writing and performing the music.

You're often playing characters from the past. Do you ever crave something in modern dress?

That's not really something I consider – I'm drawn to the human condition and that's something that doesn't radically change. In the last couple of years, I've tried to do genres I haven't done before – a horror movie [Shepherd], a Roman epic [forthcoming series Those about to Die].

'John Lennon has been dangled as a carrot a couple of times, but I'm not 21 any more!'

PRINCELY BEARING

But my passion is social realism, in whatever time period – it's not really about wearing an Adidas jacket instead of a waistcoat.

For all the scandal surrounding his ménage à trois, Graves is another repressed Englishman. What is it with playing men who personify the stiff upper lip?

It's a real thrill to learn about how someone else thought and feared and breathed and loved and lost. I spoke to a few people who have struggled with PTSD, or shell shock as it would have been called back then – there's a need to get that across palpably and viscerally, but also hopefully with some vulnerability.

You were a spy in The Game on BBC2. Were you sad that show never got a second series?

It was very much a standalone story, like with The English last year – you know it's what you're stepping into, so that's fine. But it was a real highlight for me and a real thrill. It's ten years on now and if they want to revisit Joe Lambe [his character] when he's 15 years older, I'm there.

Speaking of spies, your name has been thrown into the "next James Bond" ring. Would you like to pick up the licence to kill?

You choose the projects when they come along. Victoria is still the only time I've gone back to a character. All my focus is on finishing my current job and then hopefully the film with the music. I'm not thinking too far ahead...

And what is ahead?

I'm in an Apple TV+ series called Franklin. I'm working with [writer/director] Tim Van Patten, who's just incredible. It's breathtaking, the TV that he's worked on – things like Boardwalk Empire, The Wire, The Sopranos... The cast is amazing as well – Eddie Marsan and Danny Mays. Danny's a little bit older than me and I've always looked up to him – the choices he makes, the projects he chooses, the work he does. Just to work with him was a thrill. ROBIN PARKER say what you see!

WHAT IT'S LIKE TO...

TELL IT LIKE IT IS

Nature series are among the challenges for audio describer Pauline Cavilla

As an audio describer, Pauline Cavilla creates accessible versions of TV shows for the visually impaired, from The Repair Shop to Shaun the Sheep and EastEnders.

THE WRITE START I started as a journalist in local radio, then became a continuity announcer for BBC1 and 2. I thought audio description [AD] looked really interesting. Now I get to watch television, write and read out loud.

I SAY WHAT I SEE I provide an audio commentary of anything visual. I'm describing what's going on in the quiet bits of television programmes that blind or visually impaired people would miss. Something like: "Phil steps out of the café, he has a gun in his hand." It's also very good for autistic people, because sometimes they struggle to recognise facial expressions, so I explain them.

KEEP IT QUICK I talk concisely during the gaps in dialogue, and as close to the actual thing happening as possible. If it's absolutely vital, I might talk over someone speaking, but I try not to. If somebody's speaking a foreign language that's subtitled on screen, I'll put a different emphasis on it to sound different from ordinary AD. I don't do end credits, but I'll do title sequences.

KEEP IT CLEAR In the department, we ask each other, "If I said this, what does that mean to you?" A lot of work goes into making sure the language is as clear as possible and that it conjures up the intended image. For The Repair Shop, I'll say "tool" instead of the technical term, because if I don't know what it's called, the viewer probably won't.

PRESSING RECORD AD is never live, it's pre-recorded. I work ten-hour shifts from home, where I script the whole programme as I go along. I find the gaps in dialogue in a TV show, and my computer software will add a box with a duration for me to add my lines. I have to read out loud when I'm scripting, to make sure it's not too long – I read words much more quickly than I can say them. Then when I'm happy, I'll record it.

TELLING THE STORY Depending what the programme requires, recording the AD can take a couple of days, or just a day. I did All Aboard! The Country Bus on BBC4, where there was no talking at all. That was a challenge, as are David Attenborough documentaries where they let the pictures speak. In those cases, it's up to me to tell the story. LAURA RUTKOWSKI

BY CAROLINE FROST

It would be fitting, and hopefully bring a wry smile from the woman herself, to look on the main chapters of Glenda Jackson's working life as those of a three-act play.

There were her dazzling performances on stage and screen throughout the 1970s and early 80s – capped by her portrayal on TV of Elizabeth R in 1971 (right), her two Oscars for Women in Love (1970) and A Touch of Class (1973), as well as revealing her funny side with Morecambe and Wise.

Then came her 23-year political career in which she served as a Labour MP for the London constituency of Hampstead and Highgate (later Kilburn) and was a transport minister in Tony Blair's government.

Finally came her triumphant swansong with a return to acting in her 80s and more awards, this time around a formidable King Lear on the West End and Broadway, and a best actress Bafta award for the TV film Elizabeth Is Missing in 2019, a mere 48 years after her first for Sunday Bloody Sunday.

This last performance, which also brought her an International Emmy, was the role of Maud, an elderly woman with dementia who struggles to piece together the disappearance of her friend Elizabeth. Jackson was directed by Irish writer and director Aisling Walsh, who tells Radio Times there was never anyone else in her mind for the central role.

'I saw her King Lear on stage and thought, "Wow, she's back"'

"I saw her King Lear on stage and thought, 'Wow, she's back,'" remembers Walsh. "I'd always wanted to work with her. I'd loved her since I was a young girl. My father took my sisters and myself to the cinema, where we watched her [as Queen Elizabeth] in Mary, Queen of Scots on the big screen. I didn't really know what I was watching, but even then I realised she had something extraordinary.

"Then I saw her in Elizabeth R and Women in Love and became a fan. Her work with Ken Russell was exquisite and, later, I saw her on the stage. I loved the look of her, strong and still, and I think that was who she was, in her own life.

"I remember hearing that she had decided to go into politics and I thought, 'My God, they're going to get something amazing.' I used to watch her speak in Parliament. If you look at her speeches, she never has a piece of paper in her hand. I asked her about that, and she said, 'I just thought about what I wanted to say and went for it.' As an older woman, she still had that strength, and I count my blessings that I got to work with her."

To persuade her screen idol to play the role of Maud, Walsh flew to New York, where Jackson was appearing on Broadway, and arranged to visit her apartment. "She opened the door, and off we went. It was one of those occasions when you meet somebody you've admired all your life, so I had a few nerves, but she was so open, friendly and warm that they evaporated. She made me a coffee and at the end of our chat, she came down in the lift with me to pop out and have a cigarette. I was midair on my way back to the UK when she phoned her agent to say she would play the part."

At 84, Jackson had lost none of her powers. Walsh remembers particularly the very first read-through, where the cast gathered for the first time. "Glenda came in and sat down. She started reading and you could have heard a pin drop."

Despite her status, Walsh stresses Jackson's commitment and unselfish approach. "Every day, we worked from 8am to 7pm, and she would nip out for a cigarette and a coffee

GRAPEVINE

KING OF THE THRILL

Shane Meadows revived the "folk horror" genre for BBC2's The Gallows Pole; now it's Being Human creator Toby Whithouse's turn. With distinct echoes of The Wicker Man, The Red King features a police officer (Vigil's Anjali Mohindra) uncovering pagan shenanigans on a remote island as she looks for a missing teenager. Bridgerton's

Adjoa Andoh (above) is also on board for Alibi channel's genre-bending six-parter.

PARIS'S PRIMAL SCREAM

After the early 2010s whirlwind depicted in Everything I Know about Love, the BBC is spinning back to the turn of the millennium for its latest coming-of-age comedy drama. Paris

Lees – the first openly trans Radio 1 presenter and Vogue columnist – is adapting her own memoir What It Feels like for a Girl.

BBC3's eight-parter certainly sounds provocative: Lees (above) describes it as "a primal scream from the depths of a council estate against a world that would prefer people who don't fit the norm didn't exist".

AFTERSHOCKS

BBC2 is tackling a pair of big historic landmarks that still echo today in two feature-length documentaries.

Atomic People will gather the testimony of the last remaining survivors of the bombs dropped on Hiroshima and Nagasaki in 1945. The doc promises to explore the long-term aftershocks of the devastation on their lives (their average age is 85). Meanwhile, The Miners' Strike features new testimony from the ordinary men and women caught up in the industrial action 40 years ago, climaxing with the notorious Battle of Orgreave. ROBIN PARKER

ACTING ROYALTY

– nothing fancy, it was all about the work. We would film a scene, and she'd turn to me, and ask, 'Was that a little bit much?' She was properly collaborative and very generous to other actors in scenes they shared.

"It was an incredible thing to have done after 27 years away, and I was so delighted she won a Bafta for her work. Sadly, we were in lockdown that year, so she received it at home. I wish she'd been at the Festival Hall, as I know the room would have stood up for her. I told her that and of course she said, 'Darling, no, no, no, it's the film.' That's how she always was."

But don't be fooled – the laser cut precision blades power through branches up to 25mm thick – encouraging growth of a healthy, luscious hedge.

Extra reach

With an adjustable head that rotates through 135°, the HT50 gives you ultimate control over cutting your hedge. Adjust the head downwards so you can cut the top of your hedge easily, and upwards to slice through thorny branches without scratching your arms. The 50cm blade helps you reach up to 10ft†, cutting flat along the top of hedges for an immaculate finish. Power through foliage, leaving behind clean cut, healthy stems which will bud into a beautiful, rich textured hedge.

Perfectly precise

Weighing only 2.94kg and accompanied by the harness, you can move freely around your garden without feeling anchored down. The HT50 is well balanced giving you a more enjoyable gardening experience without worrying about the weight.

VIEWPOINT

WHY IT'S OK TO LOVE A VILLAIN

Audiences need baddies like Rob Titchener, says Libby Purves

DUM-DE-DUM-DE-DUM-DE – Aaaaagh! An ominous Rob Titchener alert for five million Radio 4 Archers listeners. He's back in the UK! Sinister phone calls! Demands to see his son! Punched by his ex-wife's hunky boyfriend! The excitement swept aside other plots, like the heir to Lower Loxley doing a Prince Harry flounce-out.

Seven years ago Titchener was a top soap villain, a subtle bully who drove his poor wife Helen to stab him and endure, on remand, the pregnancy he forced on her. It drew public attention to the new Section 76 in the Serious Crime Act 2015 about "controlling or coercive behaviour", and Helen's trial for attempted murder got people hunching tensely round the radio.

Since then the world's longest-running soap has moved on to fresh villainy under its new editor Jeremy Howe, notably with an amiable village builder discovered to be a modern slaver and mocked online as "Suddenly Evil Philip". But Titchener continued to grip social media, with a spoof Twitter account @TitchenerR unkindly asking, "Er, remind me who stabbed who?" and describing Helen as a "wet lettuce".

So Howe has decided that seven years on there's unfinished business for traumatised Helen, and brought Rob back. Presumably, given the series' incurable tendency to look on the bright side of humanity, so she can defeat him and cast off the stigma of wet-lettucehood.

SO BAD, HE'S GOOD
Timothy Watson and Louiza Patikas as The Archers' Rob and Helen Audiences love good villains. Being imaginary, they provide a harmless outlet and stop us hating real people. A radio villain is best of all because his voice gets into our head: the soft sound of Rob purring, "Darling, I'm not a monster" provoked murderous rage, almost fear, in many women. Actors love monster-roles, too: note that Timothy Watson's publicity photos emphasise a handsome dark-browed scowl.

THE TITCHENER COMEUPPANCE will improve many suppers and Sunday morning tweetalong chats. Maybe when the excitement dies down again, Mr Howe will release Evil Philip from prison and give another few well-deserved weeks to Andy Hockley, an actor, incidentally, who before rising to villain-status was actually five minor Archers characters (two random cops, an RSPCA man, a debt collector and the panting sounds for Jack Woolley's dog). Wickedness is a better gig.

'A radio villain is best of all because his voice gets into our head'

All audiences need fuel for outrage as well as affection. John Altman did very well playing the murderous drug dealer Nick Cotton in East-Enders, and was awarded the glory of an onscreen death (overdose, final confession to his mum) to mark the show's 30th anniversary.

Coronation Street has had a magnificent series of irredeemable villains, as well as artfully allowing two actual killers (Tracy Barlow and Gary Windass) to carry on for decades, gradually forgiven because they didn't mean it and got sort of likeable. But we've had Stape the serial-killing schoolteacher, Hillman the murderous conman and Pat Phelan the builder who, frankly, went on far too long undetected. Geoff the coercive husband of Yasmeen was just as nasty as Rob Titchener, and rightly fell off a roof. Currently the Street has Stephen, Audrey's son, a moth-eaten business failure who unaccountably attracts women, who has wiped out three people and is working on a fourth.

Villains act as an astringent, cleansing cynicism in long-running plots whose familiar characters generally become understandable. We need someone to hiss at without guilt. Actually, I hiss at several Archers' characters, but the scriptwriters always guilt-trip me by giving them unexpected hearts of gold. A proper villain is more bracing. Welcome back, Rob, and don't even think of reforming.

Two years after it won the hearts of the nation, Pride and Prejudice was back to mop up the last pockets of resistance. Almost ten million tuned in when it was first shown and now it was being repeated in three double episodes. By then the series had been shown in 42 countries – it was particularly popular in Sweden – and made more than £2.5 million for BBC Worldwide.

"I could never have imagined just how much it would take over the nation," said producer Sue Birtwistle. "Obviously I hoped that with it being the most-read book in the English language it would be popular, but I didn't think it would take over in the way that it did." Perhaps she hadn't factored in the infamous wet-shirt scene with Colin Firth as smouldering Mr Darcy... MARK BRAXTON

TOO RICH FOR MY TASTE

Gold-glazed lobster tails and £100 plates – do food shows know we're tightening our belts?

I'VE ALWAYS HAD a soft spot for cookery programmes. Granted, they've not had much impact on my own repertoire, but I have moved with the times – you'd be amazed what you can do with a lentil. And while no one likes a name-dropper, Mary Berry once tasted my Victoria sponge and said it was "not at all bad".

My first crush was the Galloping Gourmet, Graham Kerr. In a 1970s world where no man I knew cooked, here was one who would leap over a chair to get to the kitchen, sip wine, gurn appreciatively at his own genius and then delight a swooning audience member by inviting her up to share the meal. I was stuck at home, madly jealous, waiting for my fish fingers to be ready.

'Most British adults are overweight. We don't cook from scratch'

TV is still in love with food and cooking. In the real world, though, things are a little complicated. Most British adults are overweight. We don't cook from scratch; in fact, many of us barely cook at all. We continue to eat all the wrong things, even with the best advice available. I'm sure I'm not the only one who laps up a cookery show full of good ideas while chomping contentedly on a cheese toastie.

Food price inflation may have slowed slightly recently, but even the most fortunate of us notice the rising cost of the weekly shop. My favourite loaf up by 40p. A pack of butter for how much?!

Channel 4 did show Jamie's £1 Wonders. That's a £1 a portion, I should say. It was well-intentioned and the food looked tasty enough – chicken pie, meatball kebabs, "super-satisfying mushroom risotto". But you still need the time, the utensils, the kitchen space.

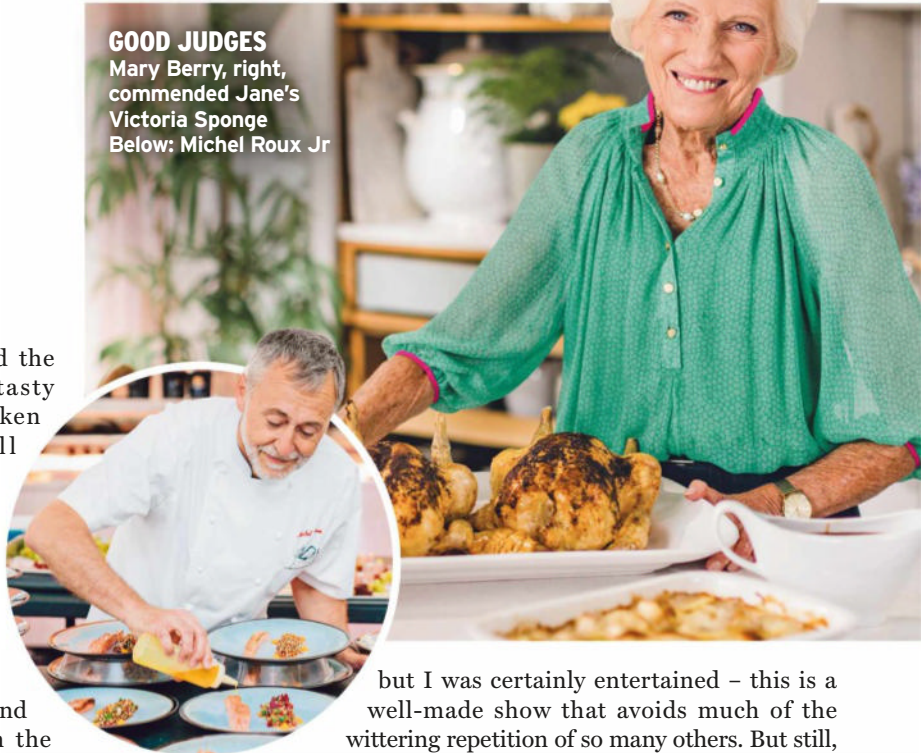

At the other end of the scale, on the same channel, we have Five-Star Kitchen: Britain's Next Great Chef. It's the best show of this type I've seen in ages, with gifted contestants and Michel Roux Jr as the exacting, firm-but-fair chief judge. You can tell how much everyone wants to impress him. The prize is a truly great one: the chance to take over a restaurant at the five-star Langham Hotel in central London. The chance to make your name.

THIS IS HIGH-END cooking at the very highest end. We know the cost-of-living crisis doesn't apply everywhere, but we don't usually get it shoved down our throats. In episode two, I watched as the chefs battled to perfect a signature, luxury dish that could be on the menu for hundreds of pounds. There was lobster, caviar and gold leaf; chefs cooking with beef at £500 a kilo and bottles of ancient balsamic vinegar.

And it can't just taste good, it has to look good, too. Everything has to be Instagram-ready. Oddly, I didn't particularly want to eat any of it but I was certainly entertained – this is a well-made show that avoids much of the wittering repetition of so many others. But still, one plate of food for more than £100?

GOOD JUDGES

Perhaps my palate is jaded. Let's instead try Bake Off: the Professionals. A new series begins this week with all the usual ingredients: stately-home setting, punny presenters, some gentle patisserie-based jeopardy, and regular judges Cherish Finden and Benoit Blin. It's a cruel fact that when your average Englishman says, "That's bang on for me!" I might be rather irritated. When Benoit says it, however, I'm rather charmed. Well, tant pis, no one ever said life was fair. After all, there are some people who can afford to pay three figures for a gold-glazed lobster tail at the Langham.

I'm sure this show has its fans, but I wasn't captivated. There was far, far too much complicated cake, and not enough simple baking. Like, for example, Victoria sponge. Did I mention Mary Berry once said mine was "not at all bad"?

Five-Star Kitchen: Britain's Next Great Chef continues Friday 8pm on Channel 4. Bake Off: the Professionals begins Tuesday 8pm on Channel 4 – see page 32

HERO OR VILLAIN?

He's the greatest male player of all time, so what is it about Novak Djokovic that makes him so hard to love, asks the BBC's tennis correspondent Russell Fuller

MR ANGRY
The mercurial Serb's aggression alienates
some tennis fans

NOVAK DJOKOVIC IS the most successful male player in the history of tennis, with more grand slam titles than either Rafael Nadal or Roger Federer. Yet when the 36-year-old Serbian steps on to Centre Court on Monday in pursuit of his eighth Wimbledon title, acclaim for him may not be as loud as you might expect.

Why do British fans find him so hard to love? Perhaps some are influenced by Serbia's role in the Balkan Wars of the 1990s, and other, older, observers by the Cold War narrative they've grown up with. After all, the baddie in the James Bond films inevitably had an eastern European accent and a pantomime villain's determination to eliminate our home-grown hero. And even though Andy Murray beat him to win Wimbledon in 2013, Djokovic has frequently blocked the former British number one's path to even greater grand slam success.

When Djokovic beat Norway's Casper Ruud to win his 23rd grand slam title at Roland-Garros in June, the Parisian crowd were chanting his name from the second game. Djokovic has become more popular in France over the years, and is fêted in Italy, China and the Middle East. But at Wimbledon – and at the US Open in New York – affection is more muted.

'When the crowd is chanting "Roger", I hear "Novak"'

By the time Djokovic won his first grand slam singles title, at the Australian Open in 2008, many fans were already Team Roger or Team Rafa. When Djokovic played Federer in the US Open final of 2015, the crowd was unpleasantly partisan and even applauded when the Serbian sent a first serve into the net.

Djokovic has also beaten Federer in three Wimbledon finals. The last, in 2019, was the longest final in Wimbledon history at four hours, 57 minutes. Chants of "Roger, Roger" rang out in the fifth set. Djokovic said it was the most mentally demanding match he had ever played.

"At times you just try to ignore it," he said. "I like to transmute it in a way. When the crowd is chanting 'Roger', I hear 'Novak'. It sounds silly, but I try to convince myself that it's like that."

Djokovic is different. He is a man who believes in Chinese medicine's body clock, and as the large intestine is believed to remove toxins from the body between 5 and 7am, he has a glass of warm water as soon as he wakes up. Having two young children may now affect his mealtimes, but he said in his 2014 book Serve to Win that he likes to eat slowly, concentrate on chewing and avoid conversations that may prove a distraction. He practises yoga, has been known to meditate at a Buddhist temple near Wimbledon and is a big believer in hyperbaric chambers, which allow you to breathe pure oxygenated air.

BUT DJOKOVIC ALSO spent his 12th birthday sheltering from the 1999 Nato bombings in the basement of his grandfather's flat in Belgrade. He was there 78 nights in a row – and has said he is sometimes still unnerved by loud noises.

"Those kind of circumstances have definitely shaped me into the player and person I am today," he said in 2016. "When I look back now, I am grateful in a way to have gone through such adversity – situations that have given me the mental strength to deal with all the challenges that have been presented in my life."

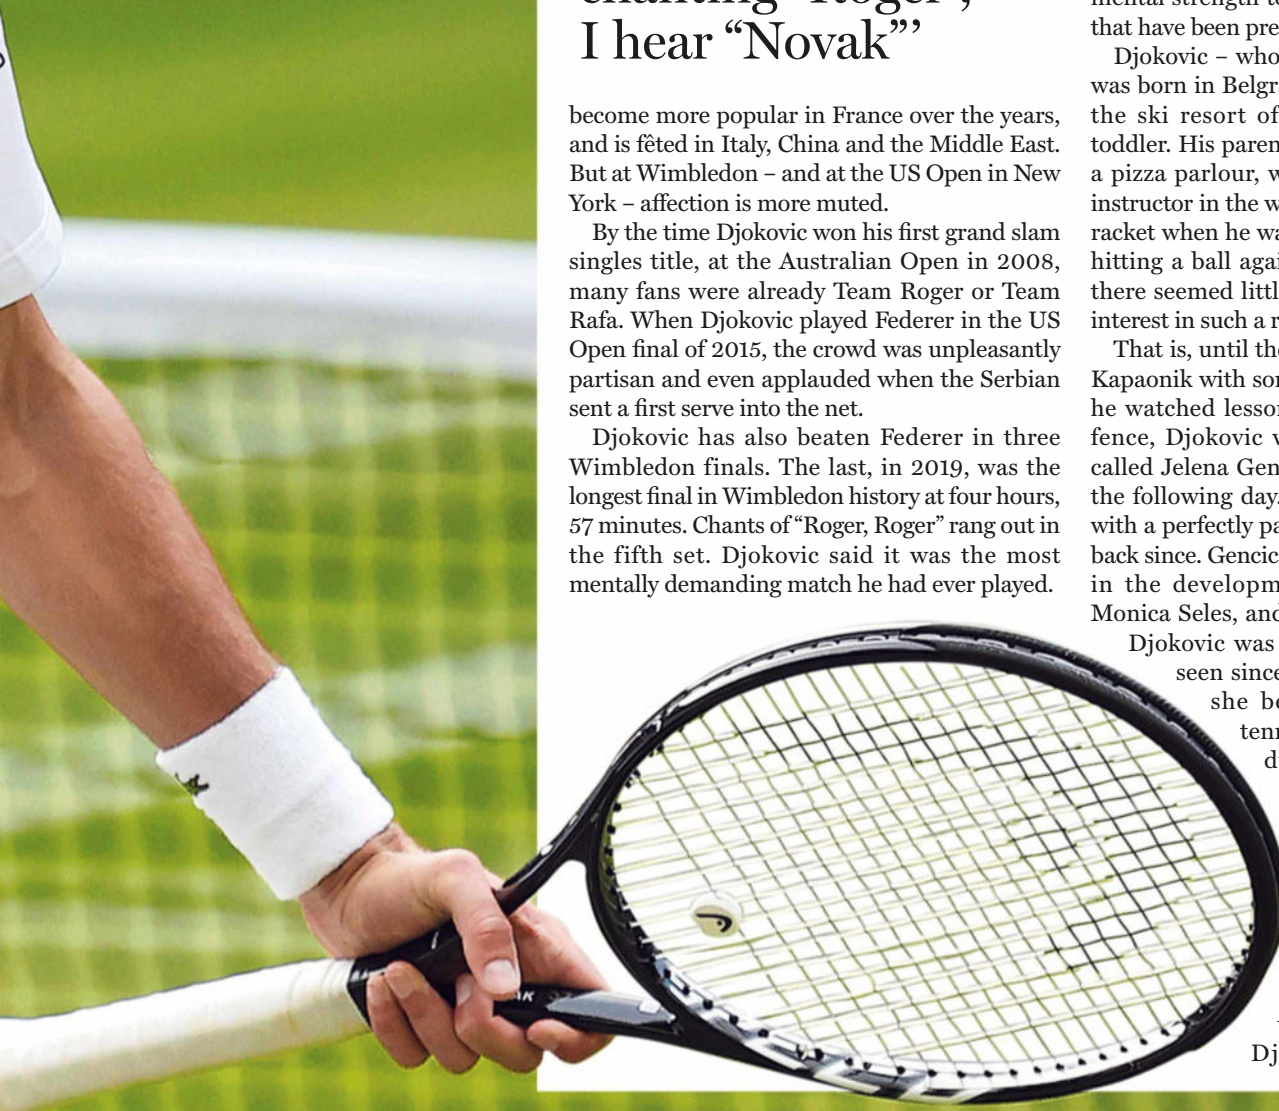

Djokovic – who has two younger brothers – was born in Belgrade, but the family moved to the ski resort of Kapaonik when he was a toddler. His parents Dijana and Srdjan opened a pizza parlour, with Srdjan working as a ski instructor in the winter. They first gave Novak a racket when he was four. He spent many hours hitting a ball against the restaurant wall, but there seemed little prospect of developing his interest in such a rural area.

That is, until the government built a hotel in Kapaonik with some tennis courts. One day, as he watched lessons taking place through the fence, Djokovic was approached by a coach called Jelena Gencic, who invited him to play the following day. The six-year-old turned up with a perfectly packed bag and has not looked back since. Gencic had played an important role in the development of world number one Monica Seles, and said within a few days that Djokovic was the greatest talent she had seen since. In the years that followed, she became much more than a tennis coach to Djokovic, introducing him to classical music and the poetry of Alexander Pushkin. When she died during the French Open of 2013, Djokovic compared her to a "second mother".

The family businesses held up well during the war, but when they returned to Belgrade in the late 90s, Djokovic's practice was > ◁ compromised by broken concrete and a lack of nets. Such was his promise, though, that he transferred to an academy in Munich shortly after the Nato bombings ended. Four years later he played his first professional tournaments.

Early in his career, Djokovic had a reputation for calling the doctor or physio on to court. At the US Open of 2008, for example, American Andy Roddick was asked about an ankle problem Djokovic had had treated on court between sets. "And a back [problem], and a hip [problem], cramps, bird flu, anthrax, Sars, a common cough and cold," Roddick replied. "He's either quick to call the trainer or he's the most courageous guy of all time." Djokovic was suffering from breathing difficulties at the time and would later be diagnosed with a serious gluten intolerance.

Djokovic may also have attracted the wrath of sections of the locker room for his impersonations of other players. As a 20-year-old at the 2007 US Open, he mimicked the service actions of Nadal and Maria Sharapova on court after a match and performed impressions of Federer and Roddick in view of a camera in the players' area. They were brilliant, but ruffled one or two feathers, and he soon stopped.

IN MORE RECENT times, Djokovic has courted controversy over Covid. The Adria Tour organised by Djokovic and his brother Djordje was designed as a series of exhibition matches in the Balkans in June and July 2020, but it was abandoned after many of the players tested positive. Djokovic was one of them, along with his wife Jelena and coach Goran Ivanisevic. International tennis tours that summer had been suspended and, even though social distancing was in place in the region at the time, the players were seen hugging, playing football and basketball and even trying out line dancing in a Belgrade nightclub.

Djokovic says he has never been against vaccination for Covid, but has "always supported the freedom to choose what you put in your body". Under normal circumstances, his stance would have prevented him entering Australia for the Australian Open of 2022. But having contracted Covid for the second time just weeks before the championships, Djokovic was issued a medical exemption.

What happened next was extraordinary. Australia's then immigration minister Alex Hawke cancelled Djokovic's visa and he spent most of the next ten days in an asylum hotel. Supporters voiced their displeasure on the street beneath his window, but the legal process turned decisively against him. The man who had already won the Australian Open nine times was deported after Hawke argued his presence in the country might increase anti-vaccine sentiment.

CONTRASTING FORTUNES

It was the biggest scandal in a turbulent few years for the world number one. At the 2020 US Open, which was played behind closed doors, and after dropping his serve to trail 6-5 in the first set of a fourth-round encounter with Spain's

'It's like the movies. You have to kill the guy 27 times'

Pablo Carreño Busta, Djokovic took a ball out of his pocket and swiped it angrily to the back of the court. It wasn't intended to hurt anyone, but the ball struck a line judge in the throat and Djokovic was disqualified for "hitting a ball with negligent disregard of the consequences".

Djokovic will also often say what he thinks, as we saw at the French Open. "Kosovo is the heart of Serbia. Stop the violence," he wrote on the lens of a TV camera after his first-round victory. The French sports minister Amélie Oudéa-Castéra said that was inappropriate and "very political", given the tension between the two countries since Kosovo declared independence in 2008 [which many Serbians do not recognise]. "As a son of a man born in Kosovo," Djokovic later said, "I feel the need to give my support to our people and to entire Serbia. I would say it again. It's something that I stand for."

Djokovic's father is a man also prepared to speak his mind. He has been critical in the past of Federer and Nadal – suggesting in an interview once that Federer is a far better player than he is a person. And at this year's Australian Open, Srdjan posed for photographs with supporters of Russian president Vladimir Putin. Some carried flags and one wore a T-shirt printed with the letter Z – a symbol used to illustrate support for the invasion of Ukraine. Novak said his father had been "misused", while Srdjan said his sole purpose had been to celebrate his son's quarter-final victory with his fans. Given the furore, however, he decided not to take his seat to watch Djokovic win a tenth Australian Open title.

DJOKOVIC'S ACHIEVEMENTS ARE UNRIVALLED in the men's game. The seven-year-old who appeared on Serbian television to say his goal was to be world number one has spent more weeks at the top of the world rankings than any man or woman in history. He has a winning record against both Nadal and Federer and, although he prefers to let others be the judge, Djokovic has every right to consider himself the greatest male player of all time.

Watching him play is frequently breathtaking. Djokovic is a phenomenal athlete and contortionist who reaches balls he has no right to reach. And as he arrives in Wimbledon as heavy favourite once again, it's clear that he won't be retiring any time soon.

Those who see only a James Bond baddie do him a disservice. He's far more multidimensional than that. But there is one characteristic Djokovic does share with big-screen action men, and it's one that makes him the opponent all players dread. In the words of his coach Ivanisevic, "He's like in the movies. You have to kill the guy 27 times, and still he gets up."

MEN TO WATCH

► CARLOS ALCARAZ

COUNTRY Spain AGE 20 RANKING 2
BEST WIMBLEDON 4th round, 2022

He's already won a slam title, in the US last year, and been world number one – all while still a teenager. I love how his game is developing and it's so well suited to grass – he's not scared to serve and volley, he uses the drop shot well, and his technique at the net is excellent. I love the freedom he plays with. He's the natural successor to Djokovic, Federer and Nadal. He's definitely a future Wimbledon winner.

◀ NICK KYRGIOS

COUNTRY Australia
AGE 28 RANKING 57 BEST
WIMBLEDON Runner-up, 2022

Kyrgios doesn't play a lot, so match fitness can be a challenge, particularly now. Following knee surgery in January, this month he played his first singles match since last October. But he has one of the best serves in the game and loves the big stage. You'd never describe him as cool, calm and collected, but any outburst is about how he plays the next point. If it affects his concentration, then he's only damaging himself. But he has a good heart and has supported my youth charity, the Tim Henman Foundation. I'm a fan.

Semi-finalist, 2022

A left-hander, he's good on any surface and made the last four last year, the first time he'd ever reached the second week at a slam. His game is unorthodox, but on grass his serve is effective and he has a very flat backhand, which can go through the court.

Having that semi-final experience under his belt can only be a good thing. He'll be looking to go further.

4th round, 2021

Former world number one Medvedev has previously won a title on grass and been a finalist twice more on the surface.

If he reproduces that form at Wimbledon, he'll go far in the tournament – he hits the ball flat, so he's well suited to grass.

He wasn't allowed to play last year due to Russian players being banned, but this year he's one to look out for.

AGE 20 RANKING 6 BEST WIMBLEDON
1st round, 2022

This charismatic youngster didn't prosper on grass last year, but he's made huge strides since. He's very strong and athletic on the other surfaces so it's a matter of his lack of experience on grass and his movement. He needs to learn quickly, but he's shown that he can do that. He's going to be around the top of the game for a long time to come.

Quarter-finalist, 2022

Sinner beat Alcaraz last year in an incredible match, and then in the quarters he led Djokovic two sets to love before the champion overwhelmed him. He knows how to play well on grass and he has enormous firepower, hitting the ball so hard from the back of the court. Though an outsider for the title, he could go deep into the tournament.

WIMBLEDON 3rd round, 2022

Katie took over from injured Emma Raducanu as the new British number one in mid-June. She has a big serve and a game to match. She absolutely loves being on a Wimbledon show court – she took Aryna Sabalenka to three sets in 2021, very nearly beating the number two seed. With a good draw she could go deep.

▲ ELENA RYBAKINA

COUNTRY Kazakhstan
WIMBLEDON Winner, 2022

The defending champion. Elena was under the radar for many, even though I tipped her to win in Radio Times! Her massive serve is one of the biggest weapons in the women's game. On grass there's less time for opponents to react to it, and her ace count is huge. She has a fabulous backhand and plays with power but also touch, so her drop shots are stunning and she volleys beautifully. Defending the title is so difficult but she's always relaxed, and I feel that venomous serve of hers will once again make her tough to beat.

She's just won her third French Open and her fourth grand slam title and has ambitions to be one of the all-time greats. It's amazing what she's achieved at such a young age. She took on the mantle of world number one at Ash Barty's retirement and dealt with it effortlessly, winning eight titles last year. I love her intelligence, but grass is not her favourite surface. Although her movement is exceptional on other surfaces, on grass it becomes alien. But she's such a quick learner that nothing would surprise me.

One of my favourite players. She's so charming, and a magician on court. Her game is one of the most creative and artistic around, with one of the best drop shots you'll ever see. Everything Ons does on court draws the eye. I'd love to see her win after coming so close last year, when she was overwhelmed by Rybakina's serve. She's had injuries since and a bad loss at the French Open, but I think she'll have a good Wimbledon.

Coco is another of my favourites. I love her attitude and personality – she's a fabulous communicator in interviews. She has some fragilities in her game, a few technical blips with the forehand and the serve. She'll deliver some double faults and her forehand can be wayward, but she works hard to overcome them. I love her athletic ability, transitioning up the court to volley. That's partly due to her excellence at doubles, which she uses to improve her singles game. Annabel Croft was talking to Kate Battersby

GOODBYE ANDY?

This could be the last time that we see Andy Murray at Wimbledon. But he won't go down without a fight, says Simon Barnes

THE YEAR WAS 2005 and I was at a little indoor tennis tournament in Basel. A 31-year-old Tim Henman – the glorious nearly-but-not-quiter – was playing a gawky 18-year-old Scottish lad, who some said might one day be nearly as good as Tim. A few mad optimists said he might be even better.

The young man in question was, of course, Andy Murray – and he won that day. “I’ve passed on the baton,” Henman said, but at the time that meant the annual Wimbledon tradition of agonising hope followed by even-more-agonising disappointment.

Some eight years later, though, Murray was winning a Wimbledon singles final in straight sets, becoming the first male British player to hold the gold trophy for 77 years. Soon the public would also come to see he was not only a great player, but a person who gets it right on most issues: a taker of the knee against racism, a feminist and an all-round supporter of decency and tolerance.

If all that sounds a bit like a farewell speech, perhaps that’s because Murray is now 36 and, though he swerves questions about retirement, this might be his last Wimbledon. But remember this is Murray we’re talking about, so he’s not going in half-cocked. He missed the French Open to prepare properly on grass, and won events in Surbiton and Nottingham, putting together a run of ten successive victories. True, he went out in the first round at Queen’s, but he’s looking like Andy Murray again.

There’s the rock-solid backhand, the penetrating return of serve, the occasional moment of genius with the attacking lob... and the ability to turn passive defence into devastating attack. Of course, there’s the fire, too. Murray has always had the special skill of converting passion into points, using his own and the crowd’s emotion to find the angle, line and power.

IS A DEEP run into Wimbledon possible? Well, Murray is in his 18th year as a professional and has had two hip operations, so he doesn’t want too many five-setters. But the two-times champion knows how to dig out a win, still boasts all the shots he’s ever had and is more match-savvy than most in the draw.

And no one has a greater relish for the struggle. For example, when asked in Surbiton if he thinks he can still challenge the top ten players of today, the great Scot replied, “I’d fancy myself against a lot of them.”

This might be the year of Wimbledon’s very last “Come on Andy”, so we should all make time to give him a cheer. It’s the least he deserves.

AT LAST
In 2013, after 77 years, a British man was finally Wimbledon singles champion

I'M IN THE HOT SEAT

Clare Balding is the BBC’s new face of Wimbledon

Sue Barker presented Wimbledon for 30 years. Did she give you any advice?

Sue has always said, “Do it your own way, do what you do.” She’s a great one for saying, “You’ve got this, it’s OK!” But you don’t take anything for granted. You do your homework. And even in Sue’s case, it was her own sport, but you still do the homework as there’s always something more to learn.

What makes Wimbledon so special?

It’s a magical sporting theatre. There’s nowhere else that produces the drama and the intensity. Wimbledon is unique because of how much the players care. This is the number one title they want to win. You see Roger Federer cry here, you see Andy Murray cry here, you see Jana Novotna cry here.

Do you remember what your first ever Wimbledon felt like?

I came here as a very junior reporter for a new station called Radio 5 Live back in 1995. My job was to sit on an outside court giving updates – and to stay until the end of play in case a story broke. One from 1995 was that Tim Henman, a young player in those days, got defaulted for accidentally hitting a ball girl with a ball in a doubles match.

Is there a particular moment that stands out to you from working at Wimbledon?

Both of Andy Murray’s victories, but also when he lost to Roger Federer [in 2012] and did that fantastic interview on Centre Court. People connected with him emotionally in a way that I think, up until that point, they hadn’t. That was a real turning point for his relationship with the wider public.

'I DON'T CARE WHAT PEOPLE THINK'

THE RT INTERVIEW BY MICHAEL HODGES

It's 30 years since Trainspotting made Irvine Welsh a literary cult figure, famous for writing about Edinburgh's dark side. But has the former addict mellowed with age?

IRVINE WELSH IS in Edinburgh. "Back in my hometown," he says with cheerful menace across Zoom, his bald head looming so close to the screen I fear, for a moment, it will emerge in my front room. He's in the Scottish capital ahead of the launch of Irvine Welsh's Crime on ITV1. Based on his 2008 novel of the same name, the series follows Detective Inspector Ray Lennox – an electric performance by Dougray Scott – as he hunts for a murderer who is targeting the city's schoolgirls.

Welsh is 64 but, hairless and apparently ageless, appears little changed by the 30 years that have passed since he first gained literary notoriety as the author of Trainspotting, his unblinking 1993 dive into Edinburgh's heroin culture. He found further fame in 1996 when Danny Boyle's film version was released and made stars of Ewan McGregor and Kelly Macdonald. It gave Welsh spokesman-for-young-Scotland status that still sticks, though he left his homeland and youth behind long ago. "I've lived in Holland, in Ireland, and in America for ten years," he says. "But you're formed as a writer, as a person, by where you grew up, by your young adulthood. That stays with you."

Some critics argue that Welsh's talent is fading. The Guardian was particularly sniffy about Crime, saying it was "not terribly innovative". But this is writing that relies on anger rather than re-invention. Crime pushes viewers back in their seats and keeps them there. With a second series well under way, the one-time wild man and ex-heroin addict is now a TV executive, more likely to be found among north London's media types than in a Leith drugs den. "All roads lead to Islington," he notes ruefully, but this weekend they've led Welsh back to Edinburgh.

Although much changed since the mid-1990s, not least by the arrival of a Scottish parliament in 1999, the city retains its long-standing social disparity. The wealthy Georgian streets of the New Town still rise above the estates where ordinary citizens live – and all, rich and poor alike, are overlooked by the looming cliff faces of Salisbury Crags and Arthur's Seat.

This glowering urban geography serves TV police procedurals well, memorably Ian Rankin's Rebus. Like Rebus, Crime makes use of the equally glowering features of Ken Stott, here playing DCI Bob Toal, Lennox's boss. Toal rejects his chief investigator's obsessive insistence that a historical serial killer, the Confectioner, is active again. You can guess which man is right.

A drug user and alcoholic in his late 50s, Lennox believes evil exists and walks among us in human form. This world view, says Welsh, puts Lennox at odds with society's present inclination towards "the medicalisation of every problem, the idea that everything can be designed out of us". Some wrongdoers can't be explained, they just have to be stopped.

"To be thinking in terms of good and evil, these kinds of absolutes, is seen as a bit medieval and biblical," says Welsh. "Kind of old-school thinking." That doesn't mean, he need hardly add, that it's wrong.

WELSH AND SERIES co-writer Dean Kavanagh have given Lennox two further existential dilemmas – how to live with the sexual abuse he suffered as a child and, more generally, how to be a good man in what are undoubtedly very bad times. "He's trying to map out a terrain of how he should be," says Welsh. "I think it's admirable, but his character is driven by this compulsion fuelled by the abuse he suffered."

Welsh believes the abuse Lennox and real-life boys suffered was widespread in the 1970s and 80s, enabled by the British class system and delivered by a pop culture that no one held to account. "It was endemic," he says. "Just listen to the music, every single song has a 'noncey', >

AUDACIOUS
Director Danny Boyle's 1996 film adaptation of Irvine Welsh's 1993 novel brought the author international recognition and made overnight stars of its lead cast ◁ proprietary type of lyric on it. It was mainstream and very much institutionally encouraged by the people at the top of society, public-school guys with their nannies and their absentee fathers and their daddy issues who were sent away to these horrible, exploitative schools. The whole country suffers from the sexual perversions of the very rich."

I'm not sure, I say, how that class analysis explains Jimmy Savile, the former Yorkshire miner whose perverted crimes were legion. "But he was aspirational," says Welsh. "Wasn't he?"

PLACING WELSH POLITICALLY is no longer easy in an age where class consciousness is increasingly replaced by sexual identity. He's a lifelong socialist who'd like a Scottish republic. (He dismisses the ongoing Nicola Sturgeon scandal as "the same kind of nonsense that's always been talked in the UK. They're looking for reasons to talk down independence.") And Crime aims as much bile at snobbish Unionist Tory MSP Richie Gulliver – played with consummate sliminess by Derek Riddell – as it does John Simm's Confectioner, who's English. "But Gulliver's a great character!" Welsh says when I point this out.

And yet Welsh has little time for those on the left who refuse to hear things that might offend them, or even allow those things to be said. "We've got this idea that everybody is influenced by everything, that everybody's hurt," says Welsh. "So we shouldn't have this and we shouldn't do that. You get to that point where you think, 'We have to be human beings, we have to have all these experiences, we have to learn.' We can't expect other people to tiptoe around us in case we say something, or they get exposed to something that's going to hurt. The reason we grow is because we feel pain. We have to feel pain or we'll become AI robots."

On that theme, Welsh recently expressed support for fellow author JK Rowling, who regularly upsets trans activists by defending women-only spaces. Welsh told The Times, "She's been demonised as some kind of witch who wants to destroy trans people but she just wants women's spaces to be protected." This was beyond the pale for some online progressives – he was called a transphobe and – laughably – a fascist. Irvine Welsh, a fascist? "Yeah, it's strange" he says. "The old left/right terms don't really mean that much these days. The people who purport to be on the left, you always ask them, 'What's your end game, what do you actually want to see?' And what they want to see is them in control of everybody else."

In Crime no one is in control apart from, perhaps, the Confectioner. The city is in a deep moral malaise; fuelled by cocaine this time, rather than heroin, much of it taken by Lennox as he teeters over the narcotic abyss. In a recent essay for the website UnHerd, Welsh implied that drugs are not necessarily a bad thing, and taking them socially allows a form of camaraderie. "Yeah, people interact. When teenagers are suffering erectile dysfunction through watching too much pornography and everything's lived on screen, there's a terrible dehumanisation of people. One of the great things about coming from a culture of punk and acid house, you get out of the house, talk to each other, have fun."

'We suffer from the sexual perversions of the very rich'

Does Welsh, who married his third wife, ex-Taggart actor Emma Currie, in August 2022, still indulge, or has ageing required he abandon old habits? "It's about modifying them," he says. "You've got to stay who you are in some ways and retain the things you enjoy in life, the things that make you feel happy. But you can't do the arse out of it. There's no point in doing that anyway, because you soon stop enjoying it." So, he's found balance? "By and large. We're all moving pictures. Your social life changes, desires change, but you have to be in tune with who you are, with what's good for you at any given point in time." To that end, he's been clubbing his way around Edinburgh over the weekend. "I was at my pal's soul club on Friday, we were bopping away," he says. "Then I was DJing at this rave in the dockers' club."

Welsh's social life could test less determined sexagenarians and so might six episodes of his drama. It's a gruelling ride where, alongside honest professionals like Lennox's partner DS Amanda Drummond (Joanna Vanderham), we meet prostitute-user and furious despoiser of bourgeois liberals DI Dougie Gillman, played with unrelenting rage by Jamie Sives. But as dysfunctional as this fictional police force is, it's nowhere near as troubled as the real-life Metropolitan Police. "Look at the terrible violence against women that's been institutionally supported," Welsh says. "How do you prevent young males, who are coming in [to the police] with a good heart and want to do the very best, from becoming toxified by this kind of culture?"

VIOLENCE AGAINST WOMEN is unavoidable on TV – there's hardly any crime drama that doesn't begin with harm being done to a young woman or girl.

The same is true of Crime but, rather than a lazy TV trope, Welsh sees it as necessary confrontation of a truth about modern masculinity. "You have to acknowledge the extent of male violence against women," he says. "Because that's the engine room of crime. Ironically, most readers of crime fiction are women, but women who are writing crime are addressing it, too."

Now he's back in the spotlight, peddling his ideas of good and evil on TV, defending JK Rowling and questioning contemporary male morality, Welsh is bound, I suggest, to be attracting more attention.

"I really, genuinely don't care," he says. "It's not my business what others think of me. People have all these different views, they're going to argue, knock their heads together on social media, block each other. They're going to try and cancel each other, instigate pile-ons against each other. I don't have any part of it at all. I mean, get laid, go and get a fg life."

PLAYING BY THE RULES

Sticklers for accuracy and artistry, Benoit Blin and Cherish Finden are back to put Britain's professional pastry chefs through their paces

CONSIDER THE SEARCH for Britain's top fictional MI6 officer over. The producers of the James Bond films have a new candidate in the opening-credits gun barrel – Benoit Blin. “He’s my James Bond!” chirps Cherish Finden, personally appointing Blin as 007. Or, more correctly, double-dough-seven.

But before Blin slips into his tuxedo, he and Finden return to test the mettle of pastry pros in the eighth series of Bake Off: the Professionals. One new ingredient added to the recipe is comedian and actor Ellie Taylor, joining Liam Charles as co-presenter. Their joshing provides the balance to one of the show's main draws – the ruthless judgements of Blin and Finden.

Blin, 55, was born in Normandy and has been baking almost his entire life. He started out as an apprentice at a bakery in his home town and was then a chef in the French Navy before becoming a senior sous chef at the Hotel Ritz in Paris in 1991. He was tempted to these shores by Raymond Blanc in 1995, joining him at Blanc's hotel Belmond Le Manoir, where he has remained ever since in the role of Chef Pâtissier.

Despite their different backgrounds, Finden's story is oddly similar. Born the youngest of five in Singapore, she was already working in professional kitchens by the age of 16. Culinary school and work in Singapore's top hotels followed, as did a move to London in 2001, where she was a top pastry chef at hotels like the Langham and the Pan Pacific.

In other words, they were both already superstars of the pastry world, but have found a second life on TV holding professional bakers to account. On the show, Blin has a faintly haughty manner, the air of a hard-to-please guru, armed with knife-sharp criticism but with praise as warm as sunbeams. This persona has earned him the status of a sex symbol among some viewers.

When I ask if he's aware of this, he laughs. “Tell that to my wife!

I’m honoured. I take it as a compliment,” he replies good-naturedly. But Finden can't be doing with this modesty. “Benoit is the sexiest man,” she affirms.

Finden, also 55, has her own admirers, enamoured by her style, ruthless attention to detail, and her faithful sidekick – the ruler.

“I have a lot of compliments on my outfits, so thanks to the stylists. Having a ruler is a must,” she explains. “Whenever viewers don't see the ruler, they message me and ask when the ruler's coming out. It's good fun.”

BENOIT BLIN

'I'm pretty nice on telly. I'm worse in my kitchen'

CHERISH FINDEN

In interviews, the pair laugh easily and often. On screen, Finden seems to be seen as the bad cop of the two – is that fair? “No, I think I’m pretty nice on telly. I always have a good laugh. I’m worse in my kitchen,” she replies. Does Blin feel like the good cop? “It’s just perception,” he says. “Cherish puts on her little round glasses and puts her hair into a bun and suddenly she looks like a headmistress. Then the ruler comes out – you’re back at school! Typically we say the same things, so it’s perception.”

But are they a tougher judging duo than Paul Hollywood and Prue Leith on the GBBO mother-ship? “We’re judging the professionals, which is why we have to be stricter,” says Finden. “If you’re judging an amateur, you’d be a bit looser.”

Blin recognises amateurs need alternative forms of feedback – but that doesn’t mean Paul and Prue are soft touches. “I’ve watched Bake Off sporadically and they are pretty tough sometimes. I haven’t disagreed with them, not yet,” he says.

UNLIKE GBBO, The Professionals is home to works of pastry art that require as much training as equipment to create, pieces beyond the skills of most home bakers. But while the show celebrates the sort of culinary excellence available to paying guests (and despite the cost-of-living crisis there are still plenty of them), it isn’t disconnected from everyday life. Finden cites how transport strikes have affected her shop and the industry, and Blin discusses how businesses are juggling to remain competitive in the face of increased energy costs. Then he mentions perhaps the biggest problem of all – the shortage of hospitality staff caused by Brexit.

Has Brexit changed how he feels about being part of a show where “Britishness” is so central? “For me, it doesn’t change anything. I’m very disappointed with the political aspect because people haven’t dealt with it – they promised you Brexit, but they didn’t deliver Brexit. They just closed the borders and made a big mess,” he says.

“As far as the show is concerned, it still celebrates the best chefs in the country. You split politics from entertainment, which is what we’re doing. Every chef in this country is struggling with the fact that Brexit doesn’t help them to have the work resources to be able to compete. Some businesses are struggling to let chefs go and compete in The Professionals, or other things. That’s a shame.” TOBY EARLE

THE NEW RECRUIT

‘I GET TO EAT STUFF’

Ellie Taylor says she’s thrilled to be joining the Professionals team

You’ve presented The Great Pottery Throw Down, competed on Strictly Come Dancing and in The Great Celebrity Bake Off, and now you’ve joined Bake Off: the Professionals. Should Sara Pascoe be glancing over her Sewing Bee shoulder?

I feel very lucky to have been part of these sorts of shows. This is the best one, because I get to eat stuff.

Has your experience on Strictly given you a greater appreciation for the pressure these contestants are under?

Strictly taught me a lot. It’s so relentless when you’re in it. The chefs who make it right to the end [on Bake Off: the Professionals] are trying to work around incredible pressures: they have family to look after, they have to practise, and they’re being filmed. By the end they’re absolutely exhausted.

I kept saying to them, “I know it feels like for ever, but before you know it, it’s going to be over. It is finite: just dig a little bit deeper, and you’re going to be so proud when you look back.”

The judges have mentioned your predilection for “mine-sweeping” the sweet treats during filming – is that fair?

The people of Britain will understand if there’s a room full of cakes and you’re allowed to eat some of those cakes, you will eat those cakes. You’d be mad not to. But I did have the fear that I was going to eat a vital component.

Is Bake Off more fun as a presenter or as a contestant?

It was lovely to be on the other side of the show without the stress [of competing] and watch these super, clever people make these amazing things. It’s very different when you’re being glared at by Paul Hollywood and his shark eyes... TE

DOCUMENTARY

Wham! ★★★ Available on Netflix from Wednesday

The brief lifespan of 1980s pop pin-ups Wham! is revisited through a mix of archive footage and interviews in this slight but upbeat documentary. The story begins as one of boyhood high jinks, following Andrew Ridgeley and George Michael as they bond at school and form a band. As fame beckons, Michael's talents outstrip those of his bandmate – but director Chris Smith downplays any hints of tension. The buoyant snapshots of Wham! in concert prove most engaging, and the film works best as a nostalgic celebration of fleeting youth and friendship. KEVIN HARLEY

Extraction 2 ★★★ 15

Available now

Kind-hearted mercenary Tyler Rake returns for this entertainingly over-the-top sequel. This time, Rake (Chris Hemsworth) and his team are tasked by a mysterious stranger (Idris Elba) with freeing the imprisoned family of Georgian gangster Davit (Tornike Bziava). Before long, the gang is pitted against Davit's menacing brother, Zurab (Tornike Gogrichiani). Hemsworth is a commanding presence during the punch-ups, and while the story is preposterous, director Sam Hargrave plays up the absurdity of the action to deliver a film that is solidly entertaining. EMMA SIMMONDS

Director Brian Taylor reteams with his Ghost Rider star Nicolas Cage in a slick, pitch-black satire that sees midlife crisis turn into midlife mania when parents inexplicably feel compelled to slay their offspring. As brooding dad Brent Ryan, Cage harnesses the ham to hilarious effect, double bluffing the audience into thinking he's about to go full berserker and then pulling back. He's ably assisted by Selma Blair as his wife in a movie that is tense and unnerving rather than sloshing in gore.

The Last Letter from Your Lover ★★ 12

Available from 30 June

This entertaining if formulaic romantic drama stars Felicity Jones as a journalist trying to uncover the story behind a series of love letters from 1965. In present-day London, Ellie (Jones) enlists an archivist (Nabhaan Rizwan) to help her find the two lovers. Meanwhile, in the 1960s, a socialite (Shailene Woodley, below) has an affair with a journalist (Callum Turner) that is charted in the letters Ellie later discovers.

The film veers into melodrama, but Jones and Rizwan are charming.

 Don't you just hate it when this happens? You and your ruthless crew have meticulously planned a gunpoint hijack of an airplane full of British TV character actors, but it turns out there's one guy on board with a particular set of skills... Idris Elba's Sam Nelson is that man in a seven-part thriller that has enough smarts in its scripting and direction to overcome the clichés of the genre – and the enveloping tension is heightened by the story being told in real time. So what exactly are those skills that Nelson has, which might foil the plans of a gang of criminals led by a typically intense Neil Maskell? Finding out will make you want to crash straight on into episode two. JS

IDRIS ELBA'S TV CV

The Wire*Now*

The actor's breakthrough was as drug kingpin Stringer Bell in the lauded noughties US drama.

The Office US*Netflix*

Elba guest-starred in season five of the comedy, playing rival manager Charles Miner.

Luther*iPlayer*

Arguably Elba's most celebrated character is that of maverick DCI John Luther (below). Recent film adaptation Luther: the Fallen Sun is available on Netflix.

Turn Up Charlie*Netflix*

DJ and bachelor Charlie (Elba) becomes a reluctant nanny in this comedy that only ran for one series.

In the Long Run*Now*

Elba created and starred in this semi-autobiographical comedy drama alongside Bill Bailey and Jimmy Akingbola.

MEDICAL DRAMA

New Amsterdam*Season 3 available Saturday*

You might be a little bewildered as this emotive US medical drama returns for a third season – it was shown in America more than two years ago and it's three and a half years since season two arrived on Amazon Prime. While you struggle to remember who everyone is, there's also the dread prospect of the first few episodes dealing with Covid, though the show finds a clever way to do that. We're some months into it and the worst is over, but patients are still coming in and the trauma has had visible effects on doctors such as oncologist Helen Sharpe (Freema Agyeman). JS

ACTION THRILLER

Tom Clancy's Jack Ryan

Episodes 1 and 2 available 30 June; episodes 3 and 4 available Friday

It's taken its time, but the fourth season of international adventures for John Krasinski's not entirely convincing superspy begins to heat up this week. So far Big Jack has remained mostly in the office in a suit, but the looming threat of a Burmese crime gang working with a Mexican drug cartel to create something that threatens democracy in Nigeria means it's time for the flak jacket and the passport to come out of Jack's bottom drawer. Events really kick off with an interrogation scene that makes startling use of a lot of cling film. JS

DRAMA

The Horror of Dolores Roach*Episode 1 available Friday*

Based on a podcast that was itself based on a one-woman play, this macabre comedy has a satirical undercurrent. Dolores (Justina Machado, above, with Alejandro Hernandez) emerges from prison to find that her old neighbourhood, Washington Heights in north Manhattan, has been gentrified beyond recognition. The only touchstone she has left is a friend's empanada shop, and she ends up establishing a massage studio in the basement. How do we get from there to cannibalism as a metaphor for class tensions? Sink your teeth into episode one to find out. JS

DRAMA

Prisoner's Daughter

★★★ 15 Available Tuesday

This watchable family drama stars Brian Cox as Max, a violent convict with a terminal illness who's given compassionate leave to die at home with his daughter (Kate Beckinsale). Their relationship is rocky, and when Max discovers that his grandson is being hassled by his deadbeat dad, he decides to step in. There are no great surprises in this simple, slow-burning tale of reconciliation and second chances, but veteran director Catherine Hardwicke (Twilight) coaxes superb performances from her cast – both Cox and Beckinsale are magnificent. JAYNE NELSON

Star Trek film collection

Available from Saturday

The received wisdom is this: even-numbered Star Trek movies are good, the odd-numbered films not-so-good. And, on the whole, the theory stands up. A fan favourite remains the second entry, The Wrath of Khan, which finds William Shatner squaring off against a bulkhead-chewing Ricardo Montalban. The sixth outing, The Undiscovered Country (above), offers a perfect swansong for the original cast. And if you prefer the Next Generation officers, seek out First Contact, a sweaty-palmed thriller. DAVID BROWN

COMEDY DRAMA

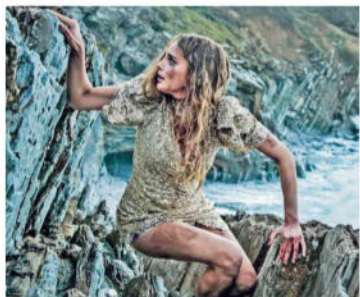

The Effects of Lying Available from Thursday

This unusual comedy drama seems at first to be a gentle domestic piece set in the plush house of mild, tentative Naveen (Ace Bhatti) and his flamboyant, contemptuous wife Sangeeta (Laila Rouass). But over the course of a single day, everything Naveen thinks he knows about himself and his life as a dad, husband, brother and son is steadily dismantled as long-buried secrets emerge.

The story struggles a little to find a balance between thoughtful drama and increasingly outrageous twists. Maybe TV wasn't the best place for it: the limited locations, long scenes of recriminatory dialogue and tendency to swerve into black farce feel more like a play. JACK SEALE

Walter Presents: Spiral of Lies

All 6 episodes available now

As a girl, Audrey (Camille Lou, above) survived a brutal attack by a serial killer called Itsas. Sixteen years later another teenager is murdered, and Audrey, now a lawyer in Paris, suspects Itsas is back because the victim was wearing the necklace that Audrey had stolen the night she was attacked. She lied to the police about what happened to her but now wants to help the new victim's family. It's an intriguing scenario and it's quickly clear Audrey's not the only one who's been telling lies. JANE RACKHAM

For both tennis and non-tennis fans alike, there is much to enjoy in this documentary series. It covers a golden era in the 1970s and 80s, when players such as Bjorn Borg and John McEnroe would square off, and a fierce rivalry played out between Chris Evert and Martina Navratilova. With superb access to key players and figures of the time, this is a gripping deep-dive into the drama that took place both on and off court. Bingeable and unmissable. FRANCES TAYLOR

A Thin Line

All 6 episodes available Thursday

A hard-edged German thriller begins with sisters Benni and Anna (Hanna Hilsdorf and Saskia Rosendahl) pulling off an audacious stunt to discredit a government minister with bogus green credentials. While Benni is a risk-taking action woman, Anna is an introverted cyber-hacker – when the differences between them are magnified, there's family drama to go with a daring fable about climate change and the limits of activism. It asks: when ordinary politics and protest haven't worked, what next? JACK SEALE

Star Trek: Strange New Worlds

Episode 4 available Thursday

The latest visit to the Enterprise is proof that this series is at its best when it focuses not on the past, but on the key characters it's established. This time the spotlight is on Erica Ortega (Melissa Navia), praised by some viewers for her forthrightness, criticised by others for the way she backchats her captain. But what we find here is that her home is very much on the bridge of the ship – a feeling echoed, I'm sure, by many Trek enthusiasts who see the crew as a substitute family. DAVID BROWN

The Woman King ★★★★★ 15 Available from 30 June

A commanding Viola Davis leads a first-rate cast in this stirring action adventure set in West Africa in 1823. She plays Nanisca, the leader of the Agojie, female warriors who protect Dahomey (pre-colonial Benin) and its ruler (played by John Boyega) from the rival Oyo Empire. Enter new recruit Nawi (Thuso Mbedu), who clashes with Nanisca and her deputy (Lashana Lynch). Director Gina Prince-Bythewood mixes melodrama and history with vigorous, high-octane combat scenes. The film isn't entirely historically accurate, but it remains a gritty, ground-breaking tale of female empowerment. JAMES MOTTRAM

CRIME DRAMA

Cannes Confidential

Eps 3 and 4 available from Monday

After Harry attaches himself to another case, police officer Camille asks him whether he's merely a murder magnet or a secret serial killer. It's a question that's been asked of all TV amateur detectives, though Camille doesn't seem too bothered about Harry's involvement. Maybe because they almost kiss following the demise of a criminal-turned-monk, and then later pose as newlyweds in the honeymoon suite of a chic hotel as they track a ruthless shadowy assassin known only as "the Nightshade". DB

The most striking aspect of these TV movies is their overtly religious tone, with characters regularly discussing Christian faith as they crack cases. They're employees of the US postal service who work in the Dead Letter Office, which tries to locate the recipients of undeliverable mail. One worker, Oliver (played by Eric Mabius), is of the belief that they're always able to eventually fulfil their job by "the grace of God" – a theory that's put to the test in the first of six new mysteries that should get the stamp of approval from fans. DB

HISTORICAL DRAMA

Godland ★★★★★ 12

Available from Monday

This austere Scandi drama is a stern examination of religion, faith and history. Inspired by real-life photos from the late-19th century, the fictionalised story concerns Lucas (Elliott Crosset Hove), a Lutheran priest from Denmark who is sent to establish a parish in Iceland. Lucas oversees the building of a wooden church while trying, and largely failing, to integrate with the community. Written and directed by Hlynur Palmason, this brooding tale requires much patience, but there's beauty amid the bleakness. JM

FANTASY DRAMA

Lola ★★★★★ 15

Available from Monday

This inventive black-and-white drama is set in a Kent country house in 1941, where two sisters (Emma Appleton and Stefanie Martini) experiment with a Heath Robinson-esque machine to intercept TV and radio signals from the future. But when they use it to assist the war effort, there are unforeseen consequences. This is an ingenious fable about cause and effect, and first-time director Andrew Legge cleverly modifies archive newsreel to create a chillingly persuasive alternative history. KEVIN HARLEY

SERIES

First shown on BritBox in 2021, this six-part drama co-created by Irvine Welsh and based on his novel of the same name tries hard to refresh a particular subsection of detective shows: the one where an agonised hero has glimpsed the abyss of evil lurking beneath us all.

Dougray Scott is Ray Lennox, an Edinburgh cop with addiction problems and a yearning to catch and punish child killers that he feels a little too keenly. But we can safely assume that he is right when he intuits that a missing schoolgirl has come to terrible harm, because we have experienced a brilliantly unsettling scene where she walks to school, disappears out of sight behind a parked van, and then doesn't emerge on the other side.

While Scott goes into overdrive, he's anchored by Joanna Vanderham, Angela Griffin, Ken Stott and Jamie Sives in the strong supporting cast. They are all trying to turn Crime into a more innovative and challenging show than it actually is, but if you like your sleuthing dramas on the portentous and unpleasant side, its extravagant despair might draw you in. JACK SEALE

England v Portugal (kick-off 3.15pm) All being well, the Lionesses' final match on home soil before flying off to Australia for the World Cup should be a fairly straightforward affair for the home team, despite a raft of injuries having sidelined a number of key England players as RT went to press.

The casualty list offers a chance for fringe players such as Aston Villa midfielder Jordan Nobbs to impress manager Serena Wiegman. Nobbs's own injury problems have kept her out of the last two big tournaments, and a good performance at Milton Keynes's Stadium MK this afternoon could put her in contention for the starting line-up at the World Cup.

"If I wanted to be like my idols, I did learn that you have to be a bit of a lunatic out there," reminisces John McEnroe in this confessional look at the life of the feisty tennis idol.

Contributions from the likes of wife Patty Smyth, fellow racket legend Billie Jean King and Rolling Stones rocker Keith Richards add a splash of celebrity, but the film barely needs it. McEnroe himself is compelling enough, as the gravelly-voiced elder statesman reflects on the on- and off-court antics of his younger self. His thoughts about his father, his inability to enjoy success and his own failings as a dad are as engrossing as the archive snippets of his "You cannot be serious!" pomp. CT

FILM REVIEWS

FILM OF THE DAY

In Which We Serve ★★★★★

1.15-3.05pm BBC2

WAR This movie is a thinly disguised take on the maritime exploits of Lord Mountbatten. Co-directed by David Lean and Noël Coward, it's told in flashback, as a group of stranded sailors await rescue from their sinking ship. It contains definitive performances from Coward himself, starring here alongside John Mills, while Celia Johnson and Richard Attenborough appear in their film debuts. This year marks the 50th anniversary of Coward's death and a new documentary, Mad about the Boy: the Noël Coward Story, is available now on digital platforms. TONY SLOMAN (UK 1942, BW, HD)

A Knight's Tale ★★★★★

11.55am-2.30pm C4

ADVENTURE This irreverent, anachronistic medieval caper sets out its stall at the start, when Queen's We Will Rock You plays at a joust. The film is full of such cheeky flourishes, as Heath Ledger's commoner dreams of becoming a knight, and so impersonates one with the help of sidekicks Mark Addy, Alan Tudyk and Paul Bettany. ANDREW COLLINS (US 2001, edited for language, violence, HD)

Escape to Athena ★★

3.05-5.00pm BBC2

WAR Producer Lew Grade assembled a high-calibre cast for this PoW movie, but the result is still underwhelming. Roger Moore is unusually cast as a Wehrmacht officer overseeing the inmates of a prison camp on a Greek island, with David Niven, Claudia Cardinale, Elliott Gould and Sonny Bono among the all-star support. TS (UK 1979, edited for content, HD)

Venom ★★

9.00-11.10pm C4

FANTASY This solo debut for the shape-morphing Marvel character stars Tom Hardy as a reporter who becomes infected with a symbiotic alien brought to Earth by a power-hungry scientist (Riz Ahmed). It's let down by some sloppy writing, but Hardy is likeable in the lead, forming an amusing bond with Venom that gives the second half of the film a twisted buddy-movie feel. VICTORIA LUXFORD (US 2018, violence, swearing, HD)

Underworld USA ★★★★★

9.30-11.25pm Talking Pictures TV

CRIME New today on Talking Pictures TV, Sam Fuller's revenge movie finds Cliff Robertson on brooding form as he seeks vengeance on the gangsters who killed his father years before. Unusually for a Fuller movie, women also get a look in: Dolores Dorn is a sympathetic girlfriend and Beatrice Kay a pillar of compassion. TOM HUTCHINSON (US 1961, violence, BW)

PS I Love You ★★

10.20pm-12.20am BBC1

COMEDY DRAMA In this second-rate Truly Madly Deeply, Hilary Swank and Gerard Butler play lovers who marry after a whirlwind romance. Their happiness is cut short when he dies of a brain tumour – but not before he writes umpteen letters of guidance for posthumous delivery. The film is sickly made, but the concept is rather creepy and chauvinistic. DAVE ALDRIDGE (US 2007, some swearing, HD)

AI: Artificial Intelligence ★★★★★

11.10pm-1.45am C4

SCI-FI Steven Spielberg's fable gives the Pinocchio tale a dark twist. Haley Joel Osment plays an android child allocated to a couple whose sick son has been cryogenically frozen. When the son recovers, the robot is cast aside and must fend for itself. Osment impresses in a challenging role, while Jude Law gives a showy performance as his guide. KILMENY FANE-SAUNDERS (US 2001 violence, HD)

Knight and Day ★★★★★

11.20pm-1.25am ITV1

ADVENTURE Tom Cruise sends up his Mission: Impossible persona here as a rogue agent who embroils ditzzy mechanic Cameron Diaz in a jet-setting espionage adventure. The big set pieces are impressive and the locations are fabulous, but the stars are short on chemistry and the film goes in one side of the brain and out the other. AC (US 2010, violence, swearing, HD)

Good Vibrations ★★★★★

12.20-1.55am BBC1

BIOPIC Northern Ireland in the late 1970s would seem an unlikely backdrop for a feel-good comedy drama, but this movie about Belfast pop promoter Terri Hooley is a joyous reminder of the power of music. Richard Dormer plays the small-time DJ who reinvigorated a city at war with itself when he opened a record shop on a wing and a prayer. DAMON WISE (UK/Ire 2012, swearing, drug abuse, HD)

DESPERATE TIMES

Thousands of Afghans were at Kabul airport hoping to flee Taliban rule; inset, interviewee Di

DOCUMENTARY

Evacuation 9.00pm C4 Full series available via C4 streaming

NEW SERIES

You'll often find stoicism and a stiff upper lip in the testimony given by servicemen and women on TV documentaries. And, initially, that's what we find in this visceral three-parter, as those involved in the military campaign to evacuate Kabul airport in 2021 sit before the camera, remove their berets, smooth down their hair and begin talking of their experiences.

But then the officers start to remember the panic of the Afghan nationals who formed a sea of people on the runway, the desperation evident as they tried to escape the Taliban takeover by clinging to departing planes. And it's in these moments of traumatic recollection that words get choked in the effort to halt tears.

Time was against all those tasked with completing the airlift, and there was real danger too, as we see when Di (right), a squadron leader with the RAF Police, takes us back to a ground attack at the base where she was stationed: "I really thought I may not be going home. This may have been a trip too far." The series continues tomorrow and Tuesday at 9.00pm. DAVID BROWN

DRAMA

Hudson & Rex

7.00pm, 8.00pm Alibi
Catch up via Now

Fans who watch this show for Rex will come away feeling short-changed from tonight's double bill as the German shepherd doesn't feature all that much. In fact, when it comes to the first episode, he may as well have been in doggy day care until the final act. Instead, the focus is on the normally under-utilised Superintendent Donovan, who's transferring a prison inmate who happens to be his former partner.

Admittedly, case number two does find Rex proving his worth following the discovery of a severed hand in a box of frozen cod. But again the real priority lies elsewhere, as it's here we learn more about season five's new addition – chief coroner Dr Karma Poole. DB

Van der Valk

8.00pm ITV1 Catch up via ITVX

SERIES FINALE

You'd assume that a case involving magic rituals and a murder committed by what appears to be a demon goat would at least be unsettling. But honestly, there are more jump scares to be found in an average episode of Scooby-Doo than this series finale.

The problem is that most lovers of ITV1 Sunday-evening crime dramas will instinctively be aware that such supernatural trappings are there to hoodwink, in the same way as four-year-old Scooby fans know that the monster is a guy in a costume. But the cartoon has the Mystery Machine and creepy castles. Van Der Valk just has Marc Warren walking around looking mardy for two hours in a bomber jacket. DB

Summer Night Concert from Vienna

8.00pm BBC4 Catch up via iPlayer

What could be lovelier? In what is fast becoming a Viennese tradition, the city's revered Philharmonic performs a free summer concert in the grounds of the Schönbrunn Palace, a Unesco World Heritage site.

The orchestra, impish jack-in-a-box conductor Yannick Nézet-Séguin and powerhouse Latvian mezzo soprano Elina Garanca were fortunate that the weather held out. And the setting, performance (Garanca breathes new life into Carmen's most familiar aria, Habanera), the intermittently adventurous programme and the sumptuous camera work combine to provide a luxurious spectacle. And they take all sorts of delicious liberties with Ravel's Boléro.

ANTIQUES

Antiques Roadshow

9.00pm BBC1
Catch up via iPlayer

It was a scorching hot day when the Antiques Roadshow team arrived at Powis Castle, one of the grandest and most historic houses in Wales. But the heat didn't deter the crowds.

On the show's last visit a trio of ruby and diamond brooches was valued at over £30,000. This time Joanna Hardy is shown a superb gold brooch in the shape of a bird, but will it be worth anything like as much?

Of course, it's not just the valuations (and trying to guess them at home) that makes this a favourite of RT readers. It's the stories attached to the objects, and this week Mark Smith hears a fascinating wartime tale of a "gun-jumper".

Coastguard: Every Second Counts

9.00pm Channel 5
Catch up via My5

NEW SERIES When most people picture the coastguard, they think of rescue work at sea, pulling people out of stormy waters or saving folk on the shoreline. There is a good deal of that in this new series – not least when a trio of North Sea fishermen are winched to safety in 30-foot waves from a capsized life raft – but the programme also shows other aspects of the work of the Maritime and Coastguard Agency.

Cameras follow members of their teams in action: when a seaman dies at Tranmere Oil Terminal, investigator Mark is dispatched to look into the incident. CERI THOMAS

DRAMA

Magnum PI

9.00pm Sky Max Catch up via Now Tune in ten minutes late and you'd be forgiven for thinking that this is a brand new episode of Baywatch. There are the waves, some surfers, as well as children in need of rescue from riptides. But rather than Pammy and the Hoff patrolling the beach, it's Magnum and Higgins in the red swimwear – the two of them having gone under cover to investigate the suspicious demise of a lifeguard in her tower.

The death has been explained away by Hawaii police officers as a drugs overdose, but the tenacious PIs don't believe that the evidence stacks up. Cue a lot of enjoyable coastal crime-busting, but in a sign of the times, little in the way of slo-mo running. DB

The Blacklist

10.00pm Sky Max Catch up via Now There are shades of Casino Royale this week as the team follows Red's new nemesis Wujiing (Chin Han) around the global private casino circuit, leading them to a Blacklister known as The Whaler (Lucy Taylor).

At the centre of the life-or-death poker game that ensues is new recruit Siya (Anya Banerjee), who would have enough to deal with without Red (James Spader) giving her an abrasive welcome to the world of top-level, off-books espionage. It's a familiar set-up, a rookie tossed into a plush but menacing world where a blown cover story could lead to a horrible demise, but when Red turns up with a bag of diamonds and a gleam in his eye, James Spader saves the day as usual. JACK SEALE

DOCUMENTARY

Jon Snow: a Witness to History

10.00pm C4 Catch up: C4 streaming Think of Jon Snow and the words "tie" and "bicycle" may well come to mind; they bookend tonight's absorbing profile, with the latter enabling him to beat his fellow hacks to report on the 1974 IRA siege in London's Balcombe Street that made his name, while some of the former were recently auctioned to support a homeless charity.

In between comes his account of a career that took him around the world. The journey comes at considerable cost to family life and Snow concedes regret at the anguish his absences caused. Accusations of left-wing bias are brushed aside as his humanitarian instincts, courage, honesty and professionalism shine through. That his retirement has come with objective news reporting being targeted like never before is unfortunate, but his is an estimable legacy. GABRIEL TATE

FILM OF THE DAY
Finding Dory ★★★★★
 3.15-4.45pm BBC1
U

ADVENTURE Following Finding Nemo, forgetful Dory (voiced by Ellen DeGeneres) is elevated from sidekick status to star of the show, as she goes in search of her missing parents – not easy when you have a memory span of a few seconds. With her clown fish friend Nemo and his father in tow, another undersea odyssey gets under way. The animation is dazzling, the comedy adeptly caters for parents and kids alike, while the story of a little fish triumphing over her disability sprinkles tears amid the laughter. Pixar's latest film, Elemental, is in cinemas from Friday. TREVOR JOHNSTON (US 2016, HD)

This Beautiful Fantastic ★★★★★
 1.00-2.30pm BBC2 PG

COMEDY DRAMA Downton Abbey's Jessica Brown Findlay stars here as a would-be writer whose unkempt garden leads to a friendship with her grumpy neighbour (Tom Wilkinson). Brown Findlay is difficult to swallow as a quirky misfit, but Wilkinson is believable as a spiky widower, in a gentle offering that feels like the filmic equivalent of a pleasant stroll. VICTORIA LUXFORD (UK 2016, some swearing, HD)

Mr Popper's Penguins ★★★★★
 2.20-4.10pm C4 PG

COMEDY There are high jinks in a Manhattan high-rise when Jim Carrey inherits half a dozen penguins in this enjoyable romp. Forming a bond with the birds, Carrey turns his apartment into a winter wonderland. Mean Girls director Mark Waters maintains a lively pace, with the adorable penguins at the heart of the action. TERRY STAUNTON (US 2011, HD)

The Spy Who Loved Me ★★★★★
 4.00-6.30pm ITV1 PG

SPY "Nobody does it better" than Roger Moore in this lavish James Bond adventure. Agent 007 teams up with a Russian agent (Barbara Bach) spectacle, it fails to add anything memorable to the mythology. VL (US 2019, violence, HD)

Bridge of Spies ★★★★★
 9.00-11.10pm BBC2
 (starts 10.15pm in N Ireland) 12

THRILLER Steven Spielberg's glossy spy drama spins a complex story of political intrigue into effortless entertainment. Set during the Cold War, it follows Tom Hanks's insurance lawyer as he agrees to represent unassuming artist and Soviet spy Mark Rylance. Spielberg manages to find humour among the escalating subterfuge. EMMA SIMMONDS (US 2015, violence, swearing, col/BW, HD)

Die Hard ★★★★★
 10.15pm-12.45am ITV1 15

ACTION This is the film that minted Bruce Willis's career. He plays cop John McClane, who faces off against suave Alan Rickman and his Euro-terrorists after they take office workers hostage in an LA skyscraper. Director John McTiernan handles the bravura, vertigo-inducing set pieces with aplomb and the script oozes dry wit. ANDREW COLLINS (US 1988, violence, swearing, nudity, drug abuse, HD)

Mary Queen of Scots ★★★★★
 10.30pm-12.25am BBC1
 (starts 11.30pm in Wales) 15

DRAMA The rivalry between royal cousins Mary Stuart and Queen Elizabeth I is once again brought to the screen, this time with John Guy's acclaimed biography as its basis. Saoirse Ronan is regal fearlessness personified as Mary, while Margot Robbie brings quiet dignity to her Virgin Queen. Sadly, a lack of spark between the pair means the film often borders on boredom. AJ (UK 2018, violence, HD)

SPORT

Wimbledon 10.30am, 9.00pm (highlights) BBC2, 1.45pm, 7.00pm BBC1

A week after Glastonbury comes another event where the BBC can flaunt its full multi-platform armoury. On television, Clare Balding replaces Sue Barker as anchor, with Isa Guha an able lieutenant and Qasa Alom handling the evening highlights. Martina Navratilova, Billie Jean King, John McEnroe and Pat Cash are well placed to lead the expert analysis and Andrew Castle as ever heads up the commentary team.

Novak Djokovic will again be the man both to beat and to divide Centre Court, with Carlos Alcaraz and Daniil Medvedev among the chasing pack. The women's tournament remains as unpredictable as it has been for years: Aryna Sabalenka and French Open champion Iga Swiatek will push reigning champion Elena Rybakina hard. Last year's semi-finalist Cameron Norrie aside, home interest may not survive the first week, but Katie Boulter, Jodie Burrage and Andy Murray will attract plenty of support regardless. The best hope for British silverware comes from Alfie Hewett, world number two in men's wheelchair tennis, who reached last year's singles final. GABRIEL TATE See pages 18-26

HOW TO FOLLOW THE ACTION ON COURT

ON TV

■ Coverage begins today at 10.30am on BBC2 with Isa Guha as presenter, before Clare Balding takes over at 1.45pm on BBC1, with daily action across both channels starting at 11am from tomorrow.

■ In the evening, highlights show Today at Wimbledon, which this year will be hosted by Qasa Alom (above right with Balding and Guha), follows each day's play at 9pm on BBC2.

ON RADIO

■ 5 Live will offer live commentary every day, with coverage starting at 12.30pm today.

■ Among the commentators and analysts are Russell Fuller (see page 18), Gigi Salmon, Annabel Croft (p24), Marion Bartoli and Pat Cash.

■ All coverage will also be available on BBC Sounds.

Qasa Alom, Clare Balding and Isa Guha

ONLINE

■ iPlayer will stream every match live.

■ For multi-court coverage, visit the Wimbledon Extra channel on iPlayer, the red button or BBC Sport app/website, which has clips, text commentary, reports and live scores.

The Royal Shakespeare Company can never be accused of playing safe. And here, in one of the Bard's most mercurial plays, performed before a Stratford-upon-Avon audience last year, they take chances aplenty.

The staging is modern, with a visual feast of 24-style split screens, mobile phones, drone footage and separately filmed soliloquies from Rosie Sheehy's petulant but ingenious Helena. But the production occasionally trips over its own boldness, not least in the array of accents and Bertram (Benjamin Westerby) being so haughtily disdainful that it's hard to glean what Helena sees in him beyond the cheekbones. JOHN AIZLEWOOD

DRAMA

We Hunt Together

10.40pm (11.40pm N Ireland) BBC1

Catch up via iPlayer

Police dramas usually reveal the identity of an evildoer in the final five minutes. However, this unsettling thriller divides screen time between its detectives and the pair of murderers they're pursuing – the effect of this being that we're exposed to all of Freddy (Hermione Corfield) and Baba's (Dipo Ola) personality kinks and flaws as they continue with their killing spree.

Some viewers may feel horror, others an uncomfortable complicity, or perhaps even understanding. But what most will agree on is that episode two features a particularly haunting use of Reach by S Club 7. You'll never listen to it in the same way again. DAVID BROWN

Dr Death

11.05pm C4

Catch up via C4 streaming

The emphasis tonight is not on the motivations of Dr Christopher Duntch (Joshua Jackson) but, as Drs Kirby and Henderson (Christian Slater and Alec Baldwin) continue to investigate, on the negligence of bosses intent on covering their hides. There this guy was, huckstering his way around hospitals with these radical proposals. But when he then started playing with patients' internal organs like a pre-schooler would a lump of plasticine, this malpractice was hushed up.

We're talking some major cutting of corners here – one supervisor, Dr Skadden (Kelsey Grammer), is even witnessed in flashback having to guide Duntch's hand during surgery to prevent him from straying. DB

DOCUMENTARY

Long Lost Family

9.00pm ITV1 Catch up via ITVX

When Paul Connolly was two weeks old, his mother put him out with the rubbish. He was then taken into care where he was physically, mentally and sexually abused before he narrowly avoided a criminal career. The story of his childhood is horrendous, but when the programme tracks down a sibling, the parallels between his life and that of his half-brother Frankie are unbelievable.

In contrast, Shaun Lawrence had a happy childhood with his adoptive family but, like so many others, he wanted to find out what happened to his birth parents and why they gave him up. He'd already made the unexpected discovery that a year after his birth they got married, but hadn't been able to track them down. As always, both these stories and reunions are very emotional.

RT Clare Balding presents further live coverage from SW19 as the first rounds of the men's and women's singles competitions continue. At this stage last year, Andy Murray got his tournament under way on Centre Court as he took on Australia's James Duckworth. The Briton had sustained an abdominal injury in the final of the Stuttgart Open earlier in the month and was playing for the first time since then. He lost the first set but battled back to eventually triumph 4-6, 6-3, 6-2, 6-4. This set up a second-round match with former semi-finalist John Isner, who took five sets to beat French qualifier Enzo Couacaud.

10.30am Novak Djokovic begins the defence of his title on Centre Court this afternoon

10.30am Wimbledon

RT Clare Balding and Isa Guha host coverage of the opening day of the All England Championships, featuring the first round of the men's and women's singles competitions. On the equivalent Monday in 2022, reigning champion Novak Djokovic, going for a seventh Wimbledon singles title, surprisingly dropped the second set against the unseeded Kwon Soon-woo of South Korea, but eventually came through 6-3, 3-6, 6-3, 6-4. Meanwhile, Britain's big hope in the women's draw, Emma Raducanu, had no trouble dispatching Alison Van Uytvanck of Belgium, 6-4, 6-4, to set up a meeting with Frenchwoman Caroline Garcia in the next round.

THRILLER This big-screen makeover of the cult 1960s TV series spawned a franchise, with each sequel raising the bar in terms of thrilling action. It's best to forget the complicated plot of this first instalment – something about agent Ethan Hunt (Tom Cruise) clearing his name and proving he's not a mole – and simply enjoy the epic rollercoaster ride that director Brian De Palma marshals with his customary skill. The Mission: Impossible film series plays out each night this week, with the latest film, Dead Reckoning: Part 1, in cinemas on 10 July. ALAN JONES (US 1996, violence, swearing, HD)

WESTERN Producer David O Selznick's costly and lurid movie offended church and censors alike – and became a massive hit. Jennifer Jones stars as a woman caught between her love for senator Lionel Barrymore's two sons, kind Joseph Cotten and lewd Gregory Peck. The infamous finale is simultaneously ludicrous and stunning. TONY SLOMAN (US 1946, HD)

ADVENTURE New to Talking Pictures TV today, this film marked one of 20th Century-Fox's earliest experiments using CinemaScope. Robert Wagner cuts a dash leading the underwater frolics as a sponge diver, while Terry Moore is his love interest. A giant octopus shows up just when the plot begins to leak. ADRIAN TURNER (US 1953)

DRAMA Sofia Coppola directs this hypnotic, if rather academic, remake of the cult 1970 Clint Eastwood film about the goings-on at an all-girls school in Virginia during the US Civil War. Colin Farrell plays the wounded Union soldier who is taken in by Nicole Kidman and her charges, and whose presence provokes arousal, envy and violence. CALUM BAKER (US 2017, violence, a sex scene, HD)

I'm Your Man ★★★★★

SCI-FI Dan Stevens shows off his linguistic and comedic talents in this offbeat German-language love story. The Downton Abbey star plays Tom, a robot calibrated to be the dream man of scientist Alma (Maren Eggert). Though dubious, she agrees to test out Tom for three weeks. The leads are brilliant, and director Maria Schrader uses wit and charm to craft something really quite profound. ANN LEE (Ger 2021, swearing, a sex scene, nudity, HD)

DRAMA A child's-eye view of bullying provides the focus for this gripping film from Belgian director Laura Wandel. Seven-year-old Nora (Maya Vanderbeque) starts school and realises that her older brother is being bullied. Does she tell an adult and risk worsening the situation? This nerve-shredding film will be the stuff of nightmares for parents everywhere. AMBER WILKINSON (Bel 2021, violence, HD)

Bake Off: the Professionals

8.00pm C4 Catch up via C4 streaming

It's tempting to keep rewatching the pre-title sequence, a fast-edit montage of all the showpiece crashes and smashes. But try to resist. Like beautiful pâtisserie, they're best savoured rather than gorged.

While the format remains the same (in each heat, six pairs of pastry chefs compete to impress judges Benoit Blin and Cherish Finden), there's someone new larking about in the kitchen: comedian and actor Ellie Taylor replaces Stacey Solomon, and continues the jolly, kind vibe. Which is just as well, because Benoit and Cherish certainly aren't in the habit of sugar-coating their criticisms.

In the first task – to make 36 opéras aux fruit and a chocolate amenity – the look on Cherish's face at one team's disastrous attempt would curdle cream. "It's all so wrong... do we have to taste it?" she asks Benoit.

They all fare better with the banoffee pie showpieces. "Oh, that's bang on!" Benoit says about one. "Oh, my God, that is fun," says Cherish about another. The rest of us are simply wishing we had some cake in the house.

Your Home Made Perfect

8.00pm BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer

The Strictly glitterball is a clue, but even without it you'll probably recognise the woman wanting to transform the Tynemouth apartment where she and her 13-year-old son Harvey live – it's actor Jill Halfpenny.

Your first thought is, why on earth did she buy this split-level flat, with its claustrophobic kitchen, lack of flow and confusion of doors?

Architects Will Foster and Lynsey Elliot suggest very different schemes (his has a treehouse vibe, while hers is more practical). But even with the familiar virtual reality whooshing of walls moving, windows popping up and kitchens magically appearing, it's hard to visualise how it will eventually look. JR

The Yorkshire Vet

8.00pm Channel 5

Catch up via My5

Some viewers may want to gird their loins before tonight's edition. This is because cheery veterinary surgeon Julian Norton has been called to a local petting zoo to castrate a group of rowdy alpacas. It's hard not to feel sorry for them as Julian pops their plums out of their packaging, laughing at the size of one pair compared to another ("they're smaller than a baked bean!"). No wonder they spit at him.

This week's most poignant patient is Eugene the pet pygmy goat, who has an aggressive tumour growing in his mouth. All surgery so far has failed, but staff at the animal hospital in Huddersfield have one last idea: an innovative electro-chemotherapy treatment. STEPHEN KELLY

COMEDY

Trust Morecambe and Wise

8.35pm Gold Catch up via Now

Repackaging Eric and Ern, this jolly shiny-floor show from 2019 mixes rare and familiar routines with chat and memories from guests. One sketch sees Eric Porter breaking from serious-thesp mode into a song and dance with If My Friends Could See Me Now – after he'd told the boys at rehearsal that he just couldn't do it.

The eavesdropping bust in Antony and Cleopatra and a dumbfounded André Previn will never get old, but hearing from Eric's son Gary Morecambe and the late Glenda Jackson adds lovely insights. As she recalls, "The greatest note that has ever been given to me was from Eric, who after a run-through said to me, 'Louder and faster'." MARK BRAXTON Glenda Jackson tribute: page 12

FOOD

Cooking with the Stars

9.00pm ITV1 Catch up via ITVX

This is not just a celebrity cooking series... This is an M&S celebrity cooking series... Yes, ITV1's heavily sponsored culinary show returns, with famous faces including Jason Watkins and Chris Eubank being paired with starry chefs in the hope of turning their kitchen skills from amateur to amazing.

First up to the stove are Joanna Page, Peter Andre, Samia Longchambon and Matt Willis – the latter being married to the show's co-host Emma Willis, who says her grand plan is for him to do the show in order to get better in the kitchen.

Food burns, someone cuts themselves and, as always, the show emulates the vibe of a high-stress edition of Sunday Brunch.

LAST EPISODE News reports may have provided statistics about the withdrawal from Afghanistan and politicians offered up soundbites, but it's the contributions here from servicepeople that make those events from August 2021 feel distressingly real.

Of the aftermath of the suicide bombing at Kabul airport, one officer says: "It looked like people had been put in a blender and tipped out everywhere." Another holds "a PTSD stone", a Cornish beach pebble, to remind her that she's not still at that scene of carnage. Many talk sadly of 20 years' hard graft being undone in days, the thought of what they left behind still hard to bear. DAVID BROWN

Blindspot

9.00pm Channel 5 Catch up: My5

We haven't seen Ross Kemp in an acting role since 2016, when he made a brief return to EastEnders. But as has become the trend for former Walford stars (see also Jo Joyner, Charlie Brooks and Jill Halfpenny), he's taken a part in a Channel 5 mini-series. But don't go expecting Grant Mitchell-style fights from police detective Tony Warden, as he's more emotionally bruised than pub bruiser.

In fact, Kemp is a muted presence in this opener, the bulk of the screen-time instead going to newcomer Beth Alsbury. She plays Hannah, a disabled woman who witnesses a distressing attack in her neighbourhood. But this is just the start of the trauma for poor Hannah... More tomorrow at 9.00pm. DB

The Good Doctor

9.00pm Sky Witness Catch up: Now

On a last trip away before their baby arrives, Shaun (Freddie Highmore) and Lea (Paige Spira) are presented with a chance to practise life as Mum and Dad when they witness a hit-and-run accident and are left caring for the victim: a dog. While their differing approaches to caring for the animal suggest their parenting styles might also clash, the usual Good Doctor scenes of surgery gain a new spin thanks to the canine patient.

In the hospital, meanwhile, a teenager is put on the spot when his father suffers complications and a dreaded dilemma emerges. Dr Park (Will Yun Lee) finds the answer, but his medical knowledge alone isn't enough: it's time to roll out some dad wisdom. JACK SEALE

GOING UNDERGROUND
Siddy Holloway and Tim Dunn are beneath the streets of London

DOCUMENTARY
Secrets of the London Underground

8.00pm Yesterday
Catch up via Now

You don't have to be a Londoner, an engineering nerd or a history buff to enjoy this show about the capital's Tube system, back for a third series. It is a transport of delight.

The ebullient Tim Dunn and Siddy Holloway are like kids with the keys to the sweetshop – except their keys allow them to explore London's usually off-limits, musty underground tunnels. They start in Camden Town, a cluttered, much-modified and grubby labyrinth of a station where they exclaim delightedly at old tiling and disused platforms.

Back at the London Transport Museum they reveal extraordinary underground facts: who knew that there used to be a pub on the westbound platform at Sloane Square, or that you could once buy a single ticket that took you from Ealing Broadway to Southend? JR

Further coverage of the second day's play at SW19. At this stage last year, Britain's Cameron Norrie faced Pablo Andújar of Spain. After winning the first set comfortably 6–0, the Briton then got the better of the Spaniard in the second-set tie-break before sealing victory by taking the third set 6–3. Norrie went on to have his most successful run at the tournament, losing to eventual champion Novak Djokovic in the semi-final. In the women's singles draw, two-time champion Petra Kvitová needed three sets to dispatch Italy's Jasmine Paolini, while eventual semi-finalist and 2019 champion Simona Halep saw off Karolína Muchová of Czechia in straight sets. On Centre Court, Serena Williams – who was returning from injury and playing her first singles match in 12 months – was involved in a late-night thriller with France's Harmony Tan. In her first ever main-draw match at the All England Club, the 24-year-old Frenchwoman caused a major upset when she beat the seven-time Wimbledon singles champion 7–5, 1–6, 7–6.

Your Home Made Perfect

11.00am Wimbledon

Live coverage of the second day's play at the All England Club, the highlight of which will be the reigning champion in the women's singles, Elena Rybakina, beginning the defence of her title on Centre Court. The world number three from Kazakhstan reached the Australian Open final in January, where she lost to Aryna Sabalenka of Belarus in a tough three-set match. Last year, with the 2021 champion Ashleigh Barty absent due to her shock retirement, Iga Świątek of Poland, who was the top seed, opened play on Centre, thrashing unseeded Croatian Jana Fett 6–0, 6–3. Presented by Clare Balding and Isa Guha.

FILM OF THE DAY

The Program ★★★★★

11.15pm-12.55am BBC2 (not in Wales)

DRAMA This film from Stephen Frears focuses on the doping scandal that turned cyclist Lance Armstrong (Ben Foster, above) from hero to villain. His confession on Oprah in 2013 opens the film, before we track back to chart his unlikely transition from day racer to seven-time Tour de France winner. Jesse Plemons (The Power of the Dog) injects a note of emotion as the disillusioned teammate who finally called Armstrong out, and Chris O' Dowd pops up as journalist David Walsh, on whose book the film is based.

Little Red Monkey ★★★★★

Talking Pictures TV

SPY Before he made Chitty Chitty Bang Bang, director Ken Hughes honed his skills on episodes of TV's Scotland Yard (showing later this evening on Talking Pictures TV) and above-average quota quickies such as this. Film noir regular Richard Conte stars as the US agent escorting a Russian boffin defector across the Atlantic. DAVID PARKINSON (UK 1955, BW)

The Shiralee ★★★★★

Talking Pictures TV

ADVENTURE In this Oz-set Ealing feature, Peter Finch stars as a cuckolded poacher who leaves for a life on the road with his daughter (the bright-as-a-button Dana Wilson), who becomes his shiralee – an aboriginal word for “burden”. The pair make for a winning double act, and the film features incredible location photography. ADRIAN TURNER (UK 1957, BW)

Bullet to Beijing ★★

4.45-6.50pm Great Movies

SPY Thirty years after he made his debut as Harry Palmer in The Ipcress File, Michael Caine resurrected the British spy for two TV movies, of which this is the first. Palmer is now in Russia, working with former KGB agents to stop North Korea using biological weapons. Michael Gambon plays a businessman and there's the casting in-joke of Jason Connery as a Russian agent. AT (UK/Can/Rus 1995, edited for content)

Buchanan Rides Alone ★★★★★

4.50-6.40pm Film4

WESTERN This colourful B-feature is based on a novel from writer Jonas Ward's “Buchanan” cowboy series and finds Randolph Scott in less taciturn mood than usual. He plays the lone-wolf cowboy embroiled in a border-town feud, and the plot convolutions are effectively handled by genre specialist Budd Boetticher. TONY SLOMAN (US 1958, HD)

The Bounty Hunter ★★

6.50-9.00pm

Great Movies

ROMCOM This knockabout road movie from Hitch director Andy Tennant stars Jennifer Aniston as the bail-jumping ex-wife of cop-turned-bounty hunter Gerard Butler, who is assigned to track her down. Aniston is charmingly spiky throughout, but her star power isn't enough to overcome the stodgy script and Butler's lack of comic timing. TERRY STAUNTON (US 2010, edited for content)

Mission: Impossible 2 ★★★★★

9.00-11.25pm Film4

SPY Director John Woo's crowd-pleasing style makes this adrenaline-fuelled sequel a different beast from the first movie. The plot sees Ethan Hunt (Tom Cruise) hunting a rogue agent (Dougray Scott) with the help of the man's ex-girlfriend (Thandiwe Newton), herself a master thief. Showing in a Cruise double bill with Born on the Fourth of July. NEIL SMITH (US 2000, violence, swearing, HD)

The 6th Day ★★★★★

9.00-11.20pm Legend

SCI-FI In this pacey action flick, ex-fighter pilot Arnold Schwarzenegger discovers he has been illegally cloned – and he wants his identity back. Arnie's one-liners get in the way of any weightier ruminations regarding DNA tampering, but the support playing of Robert Duvall and Michael Rooker offers ample compensation. ALAN JONES (US/Can 2000, violence, swearing, nudity)

Momentum ★★★★★

Great Action

THRILLER From its bank-heist opening to the chase finale, this slick action movie never lets up. James Purefoy is the CIA assassin tracking thief Olga Kurylenko, who has stolen evidence implicating senator Morgan Freeman in a terrorist plot. It's basically Bourne on a budget, but with its own sense of style. AJ (SAfr/US 2015, swearing, violence, sex scenes)

Joanna Lumley arrives in the Banda Islands of Indonesia

DOCUMENTARY

Joanna Lumley's Spice Trail Adventure

NEW SERIES

It's impossible to go anywhere these days without bumping into a celebrity presenting a travelogue. But there are few as charming as Joanna Lumley.

Like Michael Palin, she seems a genuinely interested and delighted traveller, whether she's boarding a ferry in the early hours, talking to a nutmeg farmer, singing along with an under-18s football team, trying clove cigarettes and a spicy Bir Pletok cocktail or joining a Jakarta van driver on his delivery round. I suspect that she seduces everyone she talks to by making them feel that, at that moment, they are the most important person in the world to her.

She starts her adventure on the Banda Islands of Indonesia, where nutmeg was once worth more than its weight in gold. Wars were fought, people were killed and fortunes were made over this tiny seed. Getting some nutmeg essential oil excites her, too. "Sensational. I'll put it on me for three days and then I'll probably look like a teenager again," she purrs. JANE RACKHAM

Florence Nightingale: Nursing Pioneer

8.00pm BBC4 Catch up via iPlayer

As every schoolchild knows, Florence Nightingale was a nurse who cared for wounded soldiers during the Crimean War, but there is so much more to her than the "Lady with the Lamp" image. She was a social reformer and progressive thinker who founded modern nursing. Her expert frontline research in medical hygiene and sanitation was revolutionary. She also wrote seminal studies of public health, epidemiology, social science and architecture. Lucy Worsley narrates.

Also on BBC4 tonight are repeats of The NHS: a People's History (7pm), Black Nurses: the Women Who Saved the NHS (9.10pm) and the Nye Bevan drama Food for Ravens (10.10pm).

CRAFT

The Great British Sewing Bee

9.00pm BBC1 Catch up via iPlayer

It really is anybody's competition because there are first-time winners in all three categories of 90s week, even though one person wasn't alive back then and another reckons they've been stuck in that decade ever since.

Some stitchers who have done well previously are unravelling, but it's obvious how important it is to all of them to excel. Just look at all the disappointed faces as Esme Young and Patrick Grant pass judgement on their cargo pants, fancy-dress outfits made from household textiles and made-to-measure supermodel outfits. And there's a wail of despair when Esme cruelly announces, "It's crap!" about one outfit. She's only joking – it's superb. JR

Extraordinary Escapes with Sandi Toksvig

9.00pm C4 Catch up via C4 streaming

If you can't be Sandi Toksvig, or one of her lucky guests, wouldn't you love to have the job of location researcher on this series? The unusual places they find for her to stay are amazing.

This week she's with Rosie Jones in the Midlands, first staying in a woodland retreat saucily called A Little Bit of Rough... which leads to much laughter, of course. The other two retreats are just as glorious.

There are serious moments when Rosie talks about her childhood and the challenges of having cerebral palsy, but the pals have a joyous time even though Rosie's another comedian who doesn't "do relaxing". A glass of wine while lolling in a hot tub helps. JR

Body on the Beach: What Happened to Annie?

9.00pm, 9.30pm BBC3
Full series available via iPlayer

NEW SERIES

A complex and bizarre case is the basis for this engrossing four-part true-crime documentary.

In December 2005, the body of 30-year-old Swede Annie Borjesson was found on Prestwick beach. The police were quick to decide it was suicide – but her family disagree.

Local journalist Hazel Martin tries to unpick the evidence and get to the truth, yet soon comes up against barriers – from patchy CCTV, a questionable autopsy report and strange call records, there's plenty that doesn't add up. A twist in the tale at the end of episode two seems far-fetched, but could it hold the key?

The Change10.00pm, 10.30pm C4Catch up via C4 streamingSERIES FINALE

There's sometimes a sense in this series of major events happening off-screen, leaving odd gaps in the narrative. Maybe it's meant to tie into the dreamlike rural world that Linda (Bridget Christie) has taken to like an eel to water.

In this final double bill she connects with the Eel Sisters (Monica Dolan and Susan Lynch), makes plans for a local festival and teaches the men of the parish all about the menopause. It sometimes veers towards the polemic, but it's hard to argue with its sexual politics – or the solid hit-rate of gags. And based on the cliffhanger ending, it seems Christie doesn't want to stop here. HUW FULLERTON

Awkwafina Is Nora from Queens10.00pm, 10.20pm BBC3Catch up via iPlayer

The sweet, semi-autobiographical absurdist sitcom about a New York singleton is back. As we return post-pandemic, protagonist Nora (played by co-creator Awkwafina, who also directs) tries therapy for her recurring nightmares – much to the disapproval of Grandma (scene-stealer Lori Tan Chinn) because "Chinese people don't believe in therapy".

It's a hilarious, heartfelt and inventive confection, held together by Awkwafina's quirky charm and the chemistry of the supporting cast. And look out for an outrageous guest cameo from Gina Gershon.

Angel City is a Los Angeles-based club that entered the National Women's Soccer League in 2022. It was co-founded by Hollywood A-lister Natalie Portman and entrepreneurs Kara Nortman and Julie Uhrman.

A real labour of love for its co-founders, who received support from celebrity investors such as Eva Longoria and Billie Jean King, Angel City FC was set up with an eye to changing the way professional women's soccer is perceived in the US. This uplifting look behind the scenes shows how the players and staff deal with the pressure of living up to their ambitious game plan. PW

While The South Bank Show itself seems to be winding down with just three or four episodes a year now, the awards it spawned 27 years ago are still going strong. Melvyn Bragg is championing another typically diverse set of contenders, from dance and literature to film and pop. Which other ceremony would bring together visual artist Lynette Yiadom-Boakye, Prima Facie playwright Suzie Miller, the ENO's The Rhinegold and Arctic Monkeys?

Among the familiar TV nominees are White Lotus wideboy Leo Woodall (for the breakthrough award) and Derry Girls' creator Lisa McGee (comedy), while best TV drama is a tussle between The English, Sherwood and Happy Valley. And Bragg's own beating of the drum for artists both niche and mainstream shows no sign of relenting. GABRIEL TATE

RT 7/10 Series 9. A place in the quarter-final is at stake this week as host Sara Pascoe takes the sewers on a trip down memory lane to the 1990s. First up, in the pattern challenge, the needleworkers are asked to make probably the decade's most popular trouser - cargo pants. Loved by hip-hop musicians and British girl bands alike, these trousers involve grappling with unfamiliar bellows pockets and a fly zip. Next, for the transformation challenge, the sewers take household textiles and rustle up a 1990's celebrity-themed fancy dress outfit. Finally, in the made-to-measure challenge, the stitchers take on the supermodel dress. These body-skimming garments summed up the glamour and decadence of the decade. Who will judges Patrick Grant and Esme Young deem worthy of winning garment of the week, who will go through to the competition's quarter-final and who will take an unfortunate tumble on the catwalk? A box set of previous series is available on iPlayer. See page 82.

5/9 Series 20. Chris and Xand van Tulleken. Twins, doctors and broadcasters Chris and Xand van Tulleken grew up in London, surrounded by old paintings and documents commemorating a host of characters from their Dutch ancestry. Nevertheless, the brothers know very little about their family history, apart from rumours of a connection to Dutch nobility. Their journey begins at Chatham Docks to learn more about Jan Tulleken - a sea captain with links to the British Navy - before they travel to the Netherlands to continue their research. Narrated by Phil Davis.

Grand Tours of Scotland's Rivers

8.00pm Historian Paul Murton continues his tales of the riverbank

1.00pm Wimbledon

Live coverage on day three, featuring the second round of the men's and women's singles. This stage last year saw a flurry of seeds knocked out, with the biggest shocks being defeats for the women's second seed Anett Kontaveit, who suffered a heavy 6-4, 6-0 loss to Jule Niemeier, and men's third seed Casper Ruud, who was unable to follow up his run to the French Open final as he lost to Ugo Humbert in four sets. Elsewhere, there were conflicting fortunes for two former women's champions, as 2017 winner Garbiñe Muguruza lost to Greet Minnen, while Angelique Kerber, who took the crown in 2018, negotiated her way past Magda Linette in straight sets.

OF THE DAY

Where Angels Fear to Tread ★★★

PG

PERIOD DRAMA This adaptation of EM Forster's novel about earthy passion and xenophobia stars Helen Mirren as a strong-willed, widowed Englishwoman who falls in love with Tuscany and acquires a young Italian lover (Giovanni Guidelli, above, with Mirren). Back home, her frosty family sinks in shame and sends Rupert Graves to sort things out. The inevitable lashings of dappled Tuscan sunlight and some strong performances by the cast – which also includes Helena Bonham Carter and the excellent Judy Davis – add up to the movie equivalent of high tea. ADRIAN TURNER (UK 1991)

Two Rode Together ★★★

1.00-3.15pm Great Action

WESTERN In this rather slow-moving late John Ford western, James Stewart plays a cynical sheriff and Richard Widmark is a gallant cavalry officer who set out to rescue victims of Comanche raids. The leads both seem slightly ill at ease in their underwritten roles, but Shirley Jones and Linda Cristal provide assured support. TONY SLOMAN (US 1961)

Anna and the King of Siam ★★★

12

PERIOD DRAMA Irene Dunne and Rex Harrison star in this adaptation of Margaret Landon's novel about Anna Leonowens, the English teacher who travelled to Siam to tutor the king's children. Dunne was born to play a governess, but Harrison is woefully miscast and John Cromwell's flat direction means the film suffers in comparison to the lively 1956 musical version. TS (US 1946, BW)

Talking Pictures TV

U

COMEDY In praise of fleapits everywhere, this charming comedy stars Bill Travers and Virginia McKenna as the couple who inherit an old cinema. When they decide to reopen to the public, chaos ensues. The sequence in which projectionist Peter Sellers, pianist Margaret Rutherford and doorman Bernard Miles relive the silent era's glories is a highlight. DAVID PARKINSON (UK 1957, BW)

Insidious ★★★

10.00pm-12 midnight Sky Max

15

HORROR James Wan (Saw) directs this competent haunted-house tale. Josh (Patrick Wilson) and Renai (Rose Byrne) are a normal married couple with three kids who move into a new house only to find it plagued by mysterious scratches, bangs and shifting furniture. Derivative as it is, Insidious has a few genuine scares and the final shock twist is effectively handled. ADAM SMITH (US/Can 2010, violence, HD)

The Railway Man ★★★

11.40pm-1.25am BBC1 (starts 12.10am in Scotland, Wales)

15

DRAMA This polished drama begins in 1983, when Eric Lomax (Colin Firth) meets his future wife Patti (Nicole Kidman). But this is no simple love story. After the pair marry, the focus shifts to Eric's nightmares, which relate to his time as a PoW working on the Thai-Burma railway. The narrative builds to a powerful conclusion. DAMON WISE (Aus/UK 2013, violence, HD)

Ellie Simmonds: Finding My Secret Family

9.00pm ITV1

Catch up via ITVX

Ellie Simmonds is adopted. It's an aspect of her life that she hasn't widely discussed, but now the gold medal-winning Paralympian and Strictly Come Dancing star wants to find out more about her birth family and why she was put up for adoption at just two weeks old.

She does get resolution to some of her questions, but the answers are incredibly distressing. Even as a viewer, it's horrendous and shocking to hear some of the comments noted down at the time of her adoption, yet Simmonds is stoic and pragmatic about the choices her birth parents made. Although her steely resolve justifiably falters as the process to find her mother unfolds, she doesn't have an ounce of self-pity. It only makes your heart break for her more.

Simmonds also touches on the wider issue of adoption and children with disabilities, with some very upsetting stories and stark statistics on the number of people registered for adoption who are willing to welcome a child with a disability into their family. FRANCES TAYLOR

Emmerdale

7.30pm ITV1

Catch up via ITVX

Keeping secrets comes as naturally as breathing to Emmerdale characters, and yet as soon as anyone discovers that they're expecting a baby, they leave the used pregnancy test lying result-side-up in a bin. And tonight, we're talking a rubbish receptacle at Home Farm – I mean, come on, that place is massive! You're telling me there isn't a chest of drawers or even a shoe box that could have been used instead?

But then Kim Tate would never have been able to find the test, and no doubt stare at its blue line, arch her eyebrow and put her tongue in her cheek – all of which is soap shorthand for, "I know who this belongs to and I'm damn well going to confront them". DAVID BROWN

Our NHS: a Hidden History

8.00pm BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer

In this 2021 doc, David Olusoga tells the stories of health workers who have come to Britain from overseas to serve in the NHS over more than 70 years. In other hands the subject matter could easily become misty-eyed or pious, but Olusoga ensures a fascinating, moving scan of social history. Again and again, we meet people who devoted their careers to a service that would have crumbled without them but which nonetheless treated them as inferior.

We see adverts for GP jobs specifying "graduate of a British university" and hear from a black midwife who became used to being turned away from people's houses. But there are life-affirming moments, too. DAVID BUTCHER

Britain's Best Beach Huts

8.00pm C4

Catch up via C4 streaming

Jay Blades and Laura Jackson are exploring the country's more luxurious beach huts, although they have differing definitions of "luxury", while you may argue that some of these are really beach chalets.

Jay starts in Mudeford, Dorset, where buying one of its 350 huts could set you back an eye-watering half a million, while Laura checks out a Victorian bathing machine in Margate that's been converted into a sauna. They see others in Scotland and Scarborough, but it's a cosy yet beautifully styled place in Pembrokeshire with a bit of history attached that ticks all the boxes for them both.

Britain's Most Expensive Houses

9.00pm C4 Catch up: C4 streaming

If your sense of humour skews a certain way, this Rightmove-snooping-on-steroids series can be amusing. Over-earnest estate agents pontificating about a swanky city pad or a country pile, coming out with statements like, "Each room is really voluminous". It's hard not to laugh.

Yet at a time when many are staring down the barrel of painful interest-rate hikes and the UK is facing a full-blown mortgage crisis, it's impossible to give a stuff about whether £3.35 million is a touch too high for a penthouse in Camden, or a house in Westminster that has been renovated and is now fetching £21,000 a month in rental for its owner. Read the (voluminous) room, C4. FT

And Just like That...

9.00pm Sky Comedy
Catch up via Now

When this second season opened with sex scenes (and ones that now proudly showcased the bodies of its middle-aged cast) it truly felt like Sex and the City during its prime. And this sequel is hitting its stride, treading the line between the realistic (Carrie's grief and the complex emotions around ageing) and the ridiculous (Seema being more upset that her Birkin bag was stolen than her wallet).

Steve, Miranda and their son Brady are having family therapy. Carrie is invited to support the launch of mature women's magazine Vivant, attended by Gloria Steinem herself, and now she's not with Franklyn, New York is again her dating mecca.

LAURA RUTKOWSKI

COMEDY

Not Only... but Also

10.00pm BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer
From 1964 to 1970, this Pete-and-Dud-shaped sketch show was an eccentric and cuddly confection, trading on Peter Cook's way with words, Dudley Moore's musical gifts, and the pair's ability to make each other laugh – often out of character. There were budget-busting aerial intros, big-name guests, the occasional spoof (Superthunderstingcar is a beauty) and surreal exchanges between two flat-capped gurus of nothing.

Their "Dagenham Dialogues" would tumble into flights of fantasy about being harassed by Greta Garbo, or misleading signage at the zoo. Hopefully tonight's compilation will contain examples of Dud corpsing – still one of the greatest things in British comedy. MARK BRAXTON

Ghislaine Maxwell: the Making of a Monster from 10.00pm C4 Also C4 streaming

Watching all three episodes of this series (originally shown last year) in one evening is far from easy. There's a sense of emotional whiplash, for one thing. The first instalment's early stages have you feeling almost sorry for her, as you hear horror stories of what it was like growing up as the daughter of tycoon Robert Maxwell.

But then this compelling set of films jerks you in another direction, as the story unfolds of how this spoilt, emotionally damaged socialite became procurer-in-chief for paedophile Jeffrey Epstein. As the stories of the young women hurt and abused as a result are laid out, any sympathy for Maxwell herself swiftly evaporates. CERI THOMAS

GENEALOGY

Who Do You Think You Are?

9.00pm BBC1 Catch up via iPlayer
Emily Attack's family tree is rooted in the entertainment world. Her mother is actor Kate Robbins, her father Keith Attack is a guitarist, she's related to Paul McCartney and her maternal grandparents worked as Butlins' Redcoats. But there's an entertaining surprise in her ancestry: her great-aunt was a professional siffleuse and Emily reveals she, too, has a talent for whistling. She's also rather thrilled to discover there are two other Emilys in her ancestry.

It's not all performance and applause, though, as her father's side of the tree is much darker. There was hardship and tragedy in the life of her great-great grandfather Joseph, a banksman who felt responsible for a fatal accident at Nostell Colliery in South Yorkshire. Emily really relates to his distressing story, so there are tears. JR

9.00 Who Do You Think You Are?

6/9 Series 20. Emily Atack. Comedian and actor Emily Atack knows she is from a long line of larger-than-life entertainers. Her mum is singer, actor and comedian Kate Robbins and Paul McCartney is Emily's grandmother's cousin. So she sets out to find out more about her showbusiness genes. On her mother's side, Emily discovers how her grandparents, Mike and Betty, both worked at Butlins in the 1950s. Emily is astonished to read a letter to her grandad from a teenage Paul McCartney, telling him about his new band and looking for showbusiness advice. A visit to Paul's brother, Mike, reveals even more entertaining stories about the McCartney family. Inspired by these amazing musical tales, there's only one place it makes sense to visit – Liverpool. While there Emily discovers that her family's musical roots go all the way back to the brass bands of industrial Britain. Narrated by Phil Davis. A box set of some previous series is available on iPlayer. See page 93.

11.00am Wimbledon

Live coverage from the All England Championships on day four, where the second round of the singles is scheduled to conclude. In the women's draw last year, Britain's Katie Boulter scored a memorable three-set victory over the sixth seed, Karolina Pliskova of the Czech Republic, in the first match on Centre Court. Another Brit to make it through was wild card Liam Broady, who beat the number 12 seed Diego Schwartzman of Argentina 6-2, 4-6, 0-6, 7-6, 6-1. Meanwhile, unseeded Australian Nick Kyrgios, who eventually made it all the way to the final, comfortably beat Filip Krajinovic of Serbia 6-2, 6-3, 6-1.

8.00 Our NHS: a Hidden History

RT David Olusoga explores the hidden history of the nurses, doctors and health workers who, for more than 70 years, have been coming to Britain from overseas to serve in the NHS. Without them it would have been in danger of collapse – not least during the Covid-19 crisis – but the story of the British institution has been intertwined with the divisive issues of immigration, and NHS workers from abroad have found themselves fighting battles they didn't seek or expect. See page 92.

FILM REVIEWS

FILM OF THE DAY

Destry Rides Again ★★★★★

4.10-5.45pm TCM

COMEDY For over 20 years, TCM has entertained viewers with its library of classic movies, but after today the plug is being pulled on its UK and Irish channels. It's a sad loss for fans of movies of a particular vintage, who will no doubt be flocking to Talking Pictures TV for their nostalgia fix. Rollicking western Destry Rides Again (with James Stewart and Marlene Dietrich, above) is among today's highlights, along with Mary, Queen of Scots featuring the late Glenda Jackson (see tribute, p12). Bringing it all to a close is Murder Most Foul – perhaps a barbed reference to the channel's demise? JAMIE HEALY

Lawrence of Arabia ★★★★★

11.00am-3.25pm Film4

EPIC David Lean directs this magisterial portrayal of one of Britain's most charismatic heroes, TE Lawrence. Lean creates some gorgeous desert images, while Peter O'Toole's lead performance made him a star. The film won seven Oscars and represents movie-making on the grandest of scales. ADRIAN TURNER (UK 1962, violence, HD)

Murder on the Campus

★★★ 3.00-4.15pm
Talking Pictures TV

CRIME In this early offering from writer/director Michael Winner, reporter Terence Longdon arrives in Cambridge following his brother's death. Dissatisfied with the suicide verdict, Longdon investigates in cahoots with Diane Clare, who is also looking for answers. The film rattles along at such a pace that any flaws become a blur. DAVID PARKINSON (UK 1961, BW)

True Grit ★★★★★

3.25-6.05pm Film4

WESTERN John Wayne won the best actor Oscar for his portrayal here as Reuben J "Rooster" Cogburn. The one-eyed reprobate is hired by a girl (Kim Darby) to avenge her father's death at the hands of Jeff Corey's nasty villain. The film is beautifully shot and filled with memorable moments, not least Wayne's final shoot-out. TONY SLOMAN (US 1969, edited for content, HD)

Captain Ron ★★ 6.55-9.00pm

Great Movies

COMEDY Kurt Russell dons an eye patch to play an eccentric boat skipper in this lacklustre Disney effort. When businessman Martin Short and his wife Mary Kay Place set sail with their kids, they call upon Russell for his supposed seafaring expertise. Big mistake! Sadly, the funny moments are too few and far between. TOM HUTCHINSON (US 1992, edited for language)

Maze Runner: The Scorch Trials ★★★★★

9.00-11.05pm BBC3

SCI-FI Dylan O'Brien returns as teen saviour Thomas in the second film to be adapted from the young-adult book series. Having helped his fellow captives escape a giant maze, he encourages them to search for other resistance fighters. Director Wes Ball makes the most of this sequel's larger canvas, and the set pieces come thick and fast. STELLA PAPAMICHAEL (US 2015, violence, HD)

Mission: Impossible – Ghost Protocol ★★★★★

9.00-11.40pm Film4

ACTION In this fourth entry in the franchise, Ethan Hunt (Tom Cruise) and his team are blamed for a botched mission and are officially disbanded, forcing them to work in secret to prevent a rogue scientist (Michael Nyqvist) from causing nuclear armageddon. Cruise scaling the Burj Khalifa tower in Dubai is among the highlights. Showing in a Cruise double bill with war film Valkyrie. ALAN JONES (US 2011, violence, HD)

Payback ★★★

10.00pm-12.30am Quest

ACTION Mel Gibson stars here as a professional thief who seeks revenge when his wife and crime partner leave him for dead, having double-crossed him during a hold-up of some Chinese gangsters. Director Brian Helgeland handles the action with flair, delivering a cool-as-ice thriller with a dark centre. AJ (US 1998, violence, language, drug abuse, HD)

Springsteen & I ★★★★★

1.00-2.30am Sky Arts

DOCUMENTARY Bruce Springsteen is playing London's Hyde Park today and Saturday, making it a timely showing for this film that focuses on the singer's devoted fanbase. As well as being a must-see for the converted, Baillie Walsh's film also goes a long way towards explaining to the uninitiated why Springsteen attracts such avid worshippers. TERRY STAUNTON (UK 2013, HD)

NEW SERIES

This darkly comic eight-part thriller doesn't mess about when it comes to instilling a sense of dread. Its opening scene, for instance, features a serial killer taking advantage of a snowstorm that has stalled traffic by going from car to car murdering the occupants.

And after digesting that haunting tableau, we immediately make the acquaintance of gangster and drug dealer Reagan (Richard Coyle), who is seen flying into a rage after discovering that his brother has met his maker in chilling fashion. Quite literally, as he's been frozen to death.

In short, this is a dangerous world, and one that no rational-thinking person would want to be a part of. But a quartet of rebellious 18-year-old London friends are about to cross paths unwittingly with all these threats after their plans for a summer holiday in Rotterdam take a menacing turn.

Their nightmare does, though, prove pleasurable for us, as all four performers are instantly engaging, Vivian Oparah (from recent cult hit film Rye Lane being a standout as the straight-talking Stink. DAVID BROWN

GARDENING

Gardeners' World

8.00pm BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer

While there's plenty for the team to enjoy and share at this year's Hampton Court Palace Garden Festival, the Royal Horticultural Society's second big show of the year, all eyes will be on the "iconic horticultural hero" garden. Although the title makes her giggle and feel a bit embarrassed, Carol Klein was thrilled to be asked to create a show garden this year.

GW regulars have been following its progress over the past few months but now we can see it in all its glory. She says she wants it to be inspirational rather than aspirational, and it's packed with ideas that everyone can put into practice, whether they've got acres of space or a tiny balcony. JANE RACKHAM Your RT Gardening: page 136

SOAP

Coronation Street

8.00pm ITV1
Catch up via ITVX

Does no one on a soap own a tamper-proof medicine cabinet? It may seem like a random question, but a week ago on Casualty, we had a kid endangering themselves by taking Faith's pills. And now here on Corrie, we get Bertie swallowing Gemma's antidepressants.

These youngsters must have very dexterous fingers as even I, a fully-grown man, struggle with a child-resistant cap.

Elsewhere this evening, we get Adam feeling anxious when he discovers that Sarah is at the Chariot Square Hotel bar with Owen. No wonder, really, as a resident of the Street merely has to sniff the gin at that place before ending up in one of the bedrooms. DB

DOCUMENTARY

Inside the Steam Train Museum

8.00pm Channel 5 Catch up via My5

It is steampunk day at the Bressingham Steam Museum. One devotee of the sci-fi movement describes it as "the future through the eyes of a past time", which essentially means a bunch of eccentric enthusiasts dressed up as futuristic Victorians in top hats, waistcoats and brass goggles.

Still, Bressingham is no stranger to eccentric enthusiasts. Case in point: this week the museum volunteers are overjoyed by the arrival of their first steamboat. They have crowned it the Bressingham Queen, and plan to take it for its maiden voyage on the Norfolk Broads. Some, however, have a sinking feeling – caused by a hole that has been sealed with some tape and a bottle cap. STEPHEN KELLY

Not Going Out

9.00pm BBC1

"Oh, I see," says Lee Mack in the latest episode of the winningly old-fashioned sitcom. "So it's all right to skip school for a museum visit or a funeral, but not when it's for something worthwhile, like a theme park?" To take advantage of free tickets to Adventure Canyon, model parent Lee whisks daughter Mollie out of school for a day and incurs the wrath of the stern new head teacher.

Our hapless hero desperately dreams up the excuse of a trip to the dentist. Swiftly followed by a dying aunt. What could possibly go wrong? "The system's like something from a George Orwell novel," grumbles Lee. "You know, the one where farm animals go on Big Brother."

There's no sign of the dust settling in episode two of this glossy corporate drama: Nina (Deborah Ayorinde), long-lost daughter of a hair and beauty company's deceased boss, is the new CEO and her underlings are revolting. This is all the more complex because the stropky senior employees are her half-siblings, which means there's a lot of glowering and stilted smackdowns to plough through as the show continues to find its feet.

Nina's first test is a classic problem for entrepreneurs in soapy dramas: people on Facebook are making damaging allegations about a defective product. Get that shut down, orders Nina, as the chance to prove herself by banging heads together arrives, gift-wrapped. JACK SEALE

In Concert

from 9.00pm BBC4 Catch up: iPlayer

If last week's Elton John and Blondie gigs put you in the mood for more archive pop, you're in luck. Tonight's collection has more of an 80s vibe, though most of the concerts are from the noughties onwards. A-ha in 2016 get us off to a flyer at 9pm, with the BBC Radio Theatre audience loving the updated synth sounds and Morten Harket's miraculous range. Annie Lennox's pixie cut graces the LSO St Luke's stage in London (10.35pm) for a 2009 session in which the BBC Concert Orchestra strings pick out her hits in thrilling fashion.

There's Depeche Mode at 11.35pm and Toyah at 12.35am, while Tears for Fears let it all out at 10.05pm. Advice for the young at heart?

Sister Boniface Mysteries

9.00pm Drama Catch up: UKTV Play

A big draw at the local talent competition is set to be conjuror the Great Faldini, but his trick involving a Box of Death proves to be literally breathtaking. So, with the magician murdered, Sister B quizzes Faldini's fellow contestants, who include a shy, 11-year-old singer with a big voice and her pushy mum.

Arousing most suspicion is Curly Cuddles, a depressed clown whose smiley stage make-up is doing a lot of heavy lifting. He's played by John Thomson, a suspect in a load of TV whodunnits from Midsomer Murders to Professor T. He's good value here – watch out for a nice bit of business where Curly removes his red nose as a mark of respect. DB

Five Star Kitchen: Britain's Next Great Chef

8.00pm C4 Catch up via C4 streaming

Judge and chef Mike Reid does his best Gordon Ramsay impression tonight as the contenders take on the semi-final challenge. Creating a four-course meal for 100 guests, they need to create 100 plates of food each, a task that sees Reid's patience soon evaporate.

Pacing at the pass, he barks as timing, quality and quantity issues start stacking up. One of his major criticisms is almost unfathomable. "It's too much cake!" he decrees of the dessert. And scenting disaster, Michel Roux Jr manifests in the kitchen like an apparition when things are going south, even having his own mildly swearsy Ramsay moment.

Honestly, (chefs') hats off to those who work in professional kitchens. These tasks on TV cooking shows always make it seem like the toughest job in the world. FRANCES TAYLOR

Gardeners' World

11.00am Wimbledon

It's the start of the third round in the men's and women's singles at the All England Championships. On this day in 2022, Germany's Angelique Kerber, who won here in 2018, was knocked out by Belgian Elise Mertens. Meanwhile, number three seed Ons Jabeur of Tunisia enjoyed a straightforward win over Diane Parry of France 6–2, 6–3. And in the first round of the mixed doubles, 42-year-old Venus Williams and her partner, Britain's Jamie Murray, 36, reached the second round after a tough match against American Michael Venus and Alicja Rosolska of Poland.

Presented by Clare Balding and Isa Guha. Analysis and commentary from, among others, John McEnroe, Tim Henman, Martina Navratilova, Billie Jean King, Pat Cash, Tracy Austin, Annabel Croft, Johanna Konta, Anne Keothavong, John Lloyd, Louise Pleming, Colin Fleming, Jo Durie, Peter Fleming, Simon Reed, John Inverdale and Andrew Castle.

Coverage from other courts on the red button, iPlayer (Centre Court action available in Ultra HD) and at bbc.co.uk/sport. (S) (HD)

Thelma & Louise ★★★★★ 10.40pm-
12.45am BBC1 (starts 11.10pm in Wales)

ROAD MOVIE Ridley Scott's film gives Geena Davis and Susan Sarandon the roles of their lives as the disaffected Arkansas besties who embark on a weekend trip. Thelma (Davis) flirts with a roadhouse cowboy before events darken and they head to Mexico to rob convenience stores like a liberated Bonnie and Bonnie. Detective Harvey Keitel pursues, Brad Pitt makes an early bid for stud status as a Stetson-wearing hitch-hiker, and screenwriter Callie Khouri imbues her protagonists with the will to "keep going".

ANDREW COLLINS (US 1991, violence, swearing, a sex scene, drug abuse, HD)

The File on Thelma Jordan ★★★★★ 12.50-2.55pm Film4

FILM NOIR Barbara Stanwyck plays a murder suspect who works her spell on a hapless assistant DA, played to meek perfection by Wendell Corey. He has her acquitted, only to discover her true motives. Stanwyck has a terrific, deadly allure and the moody lighting and the music conspire with her, keeping the men fluttering around like moths to a flame.

COMEDY Fans of Our Man in Havana will spot similarities with this droll movie from Laughter in Paradise director Mario Zampi. George Cole is the plumber whose design for a new ballcock gets muddled with that of a boffin's atomic weapon. Cole is soon in demand by the British and the Soviets for all the wrong reasons, and is the toast of Moscow, until the truth comes to light.

COMEDY HORROR This stylish, witty movie stands as the magnum opus in Vincent Price's film career. Price mines every nuance of tragedy and comedy with delicious gusto as the supposedly dead actor who sets about killing critics in the style of famous scenes from Shakespeare. Showing in a Price double bill with Scream and Scream Again.

ACTION Jason Statham returns as mercenary Frank Martin in this frenetic sequel. After he relocates to Miami, Frank bonds with the six-year-old (Hunter Clary) he's being paid to drive to school. When the boy is kidnapped, Frank gets down to some serious kick-ass business as he embarks on a solo rescue mission. SLOAN FREER (Fr/US 2005, violence, swearing, HD)

COMEDY With its ho-hum thrills and trashy humour, this take on the 1970s TV show sashays from one kitsch set piece to the next. Cameron Diaz, Drew Barrymore and Lucy Liu play the trio hired to find a software genius. Thank heavens for Bill Murray, whose reliable presence as Bosley rescues the whole thing from total doom. AJ (US/Ger 2000, violence, swearing, HD)

TRANSGENDER TRAILBLAZER

Nicholas McNerny unearths the 1960s case of the intersex Scottish GP who became a baronet

Turning Point: A Ghastly Mistake

Saturday 3.00pm Radio 4 FM

IN DECEMBER 2022 the Scottish Parliament in Edinburgh passed a bill amending the Gender Recognition Act 2004, making it simpler for people to change their legal gender. In January 2023, the UK Government used section 35 of the Scotland Act 1998 to block the bill – the first time it had ever been used. However, the truth is that there did exist a process back in Scotland in the 1950s to discreetly change your gender by requesting a warrant for birth re-registration. And in 1952 Ewan Forbes-Sempill, landowner, dancer and popular GP, did just that.

I never expected to discover something like this – who would? – but then I never expected to discover a trial held in secret in the Court of Session in May 1968, where Ewan was taken to court by his cousin, John Forbes-Sempill, who claimed that because Ewan had been born female he couldn't inherit the title of 11th Baronet of Craigievar from his late brother under the laws of male primogeniture. The very question of Ewan's gender struck right at the heart of the British establishment – with the implications so far-reaching that the then Home Secretary, James Callaghan, had to ratify the judge's decision.

Normally I go to producers with an idea, but this time they came to me with this incredible story for the play A Ghastly Mistake, which was a joy to research. I started with The Hidden Case of Ewan Forbes (Bloomsbury, 2021), Zoë Playdon's brilliant account of Ewan's life, and complemented that with other contemporary press accounts, the transcript of the trial – and Ewan's own two memoirs that he wrote towards the end of his life.

These memoirs are fascinating because in all the descriptions of hunting with his precious dogs, dancing the Bonnie Brux and lancing boils in cottages, he doesn't mention the trial once. Not once. It's an act of obsessive avoidance that is so revealing of Ewan's determination that his life and achievements should mean more than a court case he was desperate to avoid. Ewan was a reluctant pioneer – what he wanted, most of all, was a quiet life with his wife, Patty.

THIS, OF COURSE, makes the trial even more poignant. My producer and I spent a day in the National Records of Scotland in Edinburgh reading 537 pages of transcript. It's predictably horrifying in places – especially the cross-examination of Patty. But in all the expert witness arguments about Ewan's physical appearance there is perhaps, for the first time in a UK court, a recognition of the psychological dimensions of gender. Ewan's treatment growing up had been directed by Europe's best doctors in endocrinology – but now the psychiatrists were taking over.

It feels hugely important to be writing this now, a story from the 1960s that resonates today. In our casting of actors ranging from Kit Green, the non-binary creator of comic country-and-western star Tina C, to RSC star Frances Barber, we had an opportunity to open up discussions, even during the recording of the play, that felt positive and respectful, and where we could all learn from others' experiences.

In Kit we had our perfect Ewan. As Kit writes: "Ewan's story is so specific to his time, his country, his class, and his privilege, and yet his experiences of the love of a supportive mother and partner, and personal determination feel very relevant to my life and the lives I see being lived around me. Stories of real lives, lived with all their moments of compromise, pain, joy, and triumph, can illustrate our own a little clearer. I loved playing this man and for a while being zoomed out of the complexities of being a trans person in 2023."

Ironically, I think Ewan Forbes would have preferred the trial to remain secret for ever. However, his huge courage in declaring who he was we can now honour as a true "turning point".

DOCUMENTARY The NHS at 75: Covid Memories

Tuesday 9.00pm Radio 4

"I wanted to try to get my visceral emotions into words and I thought if I could write it as I felt it then it would have authenticity," says Dr Damon Kamming, a consultant anaesthetist who worked through the first wave of the Covid pandemic in March 2020 at London's University College Hospital. Like the other NHS frontline workers heard here, he faced death every day and writing became a much-needed release. This powerful selection of personal testimony does have authenticity – but it also has compassion, despair and, ultimately, hope.

Book of the Week: The Madness

Mon–Fri 9.45am Radio 4 FM

There was always a sense with Fergal Keane's war reporting that there were things going on inside him that remained unspoken. With this tumultuous but calmly rendered memoir, the exterior that only ever hinted at what lay beneath is ripped off and we learn about the psychological damage that attended upon Keane after an upbringing and a career that brought him face to face with horrors all over the world. This is powerful stuff. SIMON O'HAGAN

DRAMA

Drama on 3: Emperor and Galilean

Sunday 7.30pm Radio 3

Henrik Ibsen's "world drama in two parts" recounts the youth and reign of Julian the Apostate, the last pagan Roman emperor. The first instalment chronicles young Julian's (Freddie Fox, below) growing disenchantment with Christianity – the imperial creed since the conversion of Constantine the Great – and his adoption of a neo-Platonic theology that would inspire him to return Rome to paganism on his accession. Ideas about faith, order and good government are intertwined in true Ibsen fashion.

Sideways: China's Ping Pong Power

Wednesday 4.00pm Radio 4

Former British number one Matthew Syed knows all about playing table tennis and in this three-part spin-off from his regular series, he tells a compelling story of how ping pong is integral to understanding how China became a superpower. The story begins when Mao Tse-tung (above), a keen player himself, founded his republic in 1949 and chose table tennis as a vehicle to project China's strength on the global stage. Players were trained in a vast nationwide system to become world-beaters, and their soft power helped lay the way for President Nixon's historic visit to China. DAVID CRAWFORD

The Archers

Sunday–Friday 7.00pm Radio 4

Let's start with good news – it's the wedding of Tracy (Susie Riddell, above) and Jazzer this week, and while a last-minute emergency and Jim's present cause chaos, it is a heartening story. But just as things are starting to feel more positive for Helen and Lee, Henry drops a shocking bombshell. Meanwhile, Susan and Neil struggle to cope with George, and Lynda's plan for the fete takes shape. DC Libby Purves's viewpoint: page 15

The Louis Theroux Podcast

Grounded, Louis Theroux's lockdown project, ran for two series on Radio 4. Now it's moved exclusively to Spotify. Same format except that he can get away with a lot more. You may not have known that Craig David is celibate. There's highly creative swearing in the Shania Twain episode. And that's just from Theroux. Other guests include Nile Rodgers, Nick Cave and "cringe comedy" YouTuber Amelia Dimoldenberg. Everyone wants to talk to him. This could run and run.

SMART COOKIES

MONEY

The Economics of Everyday Things

The Knack's My Sharona was a big hit in 1979. More than 40 years later it still provides just one of its writers with a six-figure annual income. Once a year, when the Girl Scouts of America launch their cookie drive, the American biscuit industry takes its foot off the gas because it knows it can't compete. The pricing of petrol at the pump is subject to the Rockets and Feathers principle, whereby it can go up quickly but will take ages to come back down. If you're partial to this kind of conversational ammunition you'll enjoy this breezy series from the Freakonomics network that celebrates the secret fiscal life of everything from sports mascots to hotel soaps. DAVID HEPWORTH

Dealing

Ever wondered what antiques dealing is really like away from ritzy auction houses and Antiques Roadshow? Manchester lads Alex and Monty offer an anecdote-filled account of how they set up their antique jewellery business Butter Lane, from lots listed on eBay with a 99p start price to their high-end present-day website. Resolutely down to earth, the guys open up in later episodes about taking risks that cost them dear and the visceral shock of falling prey to armed robbers. CHRIS GARDNER

BUSINESS

The Closer

How to turn business stories into human-interest stories without stinting on the financial nuts and bolts is always a challenge, but American podcast The Closer is well in credit with its focus on the drama that lies behind many a big deal. There's a terrific episode telling the story of the vision that David Bowie brought to capitalising on his back catalogue; other topics covered include the demise of Toys R Us, and the US women's football team's fight for equal pay. SIMON O'HAGAN

CRIME

Gateway: Cocaine, Murder and Dirty Money in Europe

When it comes to the war on drugs, comparing Rotterdam and Antwerp to Miami in the 1980s may seem over the top. However, this six-part podcast vividly lifts the lid on how the ports of these historic cities are now major global gateways for the cocaine trade. The rise and fall of Dutch-Moroccan drugs lord Ridouan Taghi is the fearsome focus of a series that explores how globalisation, money and violence could turn Europe into the next narco-state. JEREMY ASPINALL

Welcome to Midsomer

Perhaps it's the bucolic setting, or maybe it's the sheer number of deaths, but the ITV crime drama Midsomer Murders has a loyal following in the States. Hosts Eric Buscher and Eileen Becker put out a monthly podcast that analyses one of the 131 episodes in intricate detail that would put DCIs John and Tom Barnaby to shame. They are particularly taken by the weirdness of it all, as well as the ingenious methods of dispatching victims. It's respectfully tongue-in-cheek. ANNA JONES

The Missing

The longer they're gone, the more difficult it is to find one of the people missing reported every 90 seconds in the UK. Pandora Sykes hosts this compelling podcast, where each episode tells the story of one long-term missing person and appeals for information. Among them is Steven Clark, a 23-year-old who disappeared in 1992 and whose parents came under police investigation 28 years later – they were released without charge. Made with charities Locate International and Missing People, who believe that such mysteries can still be solved. FIONA HUGHES

From the Oasthouse: the Alan Partridge Podcast

Ahead of the third series arriving in August, charting his latest attempt to stay relevant, Alan Partridge offers this juicy free taster on Audible. It sees north Norfolk's finest broadcaster providing his own, unofficial commentary on the coronation for his listeners as they watch on iPlayer with the sound muted. It's as digressive, un-PC and idiotic as you'd expect, with Partridge regressing to his sports commentary roots as the crown is placed on the King's head. Get in!

Desert Island Discs

For a man who is such a totem of American words and thoughts, David Sedaris has long been taken to many British hearts. This meander down musical memory lane goes a fair way to explaining his unique charm, as he moves effortlessly between such significant life events as his sister's death and father's hostility, all relayed in Charlie Brown tones. His many fans will need no persuading of the pleasure of sitting back with Sedaris; others will find a new friend. CAROLINE FROST

Sport podcasts must give up gambling ads

IF YOU'RE IN the habit of listening to podcasts about sport, you're also exposed to advertisements for gambling. A lot of them. Gambling is no longer an activity you pursue at the bookies. These days it pursues you 24 hours a day via the same smartphone you use to pay for everything else in your life. Sports betting will soon be worth $100 billion a year globally – and most of that is via a phone.

The boom in sports podcasting has given the gambling firms fighting for a share of that money new, relatively cheap ways of reaching the young men who are their target market, giving them opportunities to bet more often and on things they never realised they could bet on. The proliferation of this kind of ubiquitous advertising builds a perception that it is impossible to properly enjoy a sporting occasion of any kind if you don't have some money riding on it. Kids growing up wearing club shirts with the logos of gambling firms on them now see betting as a key part of the football experience. This cannot be a good thing.

THE RECENT BANNING of England star Ivan Toney for breaching football rules on gambling may be a wake-up call for an industry whose reliance on the marketing budgets of betting firms has long been unseemly. In a few years time, Premier League clubs will no longer accept shirt sponsorship from gambling firms. The Guardian group has just announced that in future it will not be taking gambling advertisements. This will apply to their podcasts as well as their newspapers. Where they go others may follow.

Gambling is a legal activity. The advertising of gambling is also legal; very legal, in fact, which is why every advert is followed by a laundry list of health warnings. A Government White Paper earlier this year rejected an outright ban. The advertising of gambling will remain governed by codes that restrict every aspect apart from one – how much of it there is. If you're a regular listener to sports podcasts you may be thinking we've already got too much.

Yeti

Legendary creatures like Bigfoot and the Loch Ness Monster continue to hold a fascination, as does the bipedal, ape-like subject of this thought-provoking ten-part series (released as a boxset on Sounds today). Here, long-time Yeti enthusiast Andrew Benfield and close friend Richard Horsey travel to countries intersected by the Himalayas to hear remarkable first-hand accounts from villagers, yak herders and even a venerable Buddhist exorcist. Benfield's romantic view of Yeti lore is leavened by Horsey, who adopts an empirical approach, demanding evidence rather than just tales of nine-foot-tall semi-humans with "the ability to disappear". It creates a feisty dynamic that will test their friendship as much as their stamina over the course of this journey. JEREMY ASPINALL

Son Doong holds the title of the world's biggest cave but has been visited by relatively few people due to its remote location deep in the jungles of central Vietnam. School teacher Huong Le was among the first to visit in 2014 and was awed by its beauty, but was dismayed to learn of plans to build a cable car route that would increase tourism to the site. In this documentary we hear about Le's campaign to protect Son Doong's pristine environment from being damaged or even destroyed. TOM GOULDING

6.30 Opera on 3: Verdi's Il trovatore

A recent Royal Opera House performance of Verdi's epic melodrama of superstition and rivalry in a new production by Adele Thomas that sets Verdi's tale in a Hieronymus Bosch-inspired world of medieval superstition. Passions run high as Manrico and the Count di Luna compete for the affections of Leonora. Little do they know, Manrico's mother Azucena has been keeping a terrible secret for decades. Soon a curse from the past will rise up from the ashes with devastating implications for them all. Recorded on 13 June. Presented by Georgia Mann, with commentary from Sarah Hibberd.

Leonora Rachel Willis-Sorensen (soprano)
Azucena Jamie Barton (mezzo)
Manrico Roberto Massi (tenor)
Conte di Luna Ludovic Tézier (baritone)
Ferrando, Luna's sidekick Roberto Tagliavini (bass)

One of our most welcome guests from Hollywood is Stanley Tucci (above), resident in London since he married Emily Blunt's sister Felicity in 2012. The actor has become a familiar face on British screens, most recently for his TV series Searching for Italy in which he ate his way through his motherland. Food and drink are predominant in his conversation today with Lauren Laverne. He cooked a veal stew for his old friend and co-star Meryl Streep, and he loves a martini. He also elaborates on the cancer diagnosis he revealed in his 2021 autobiography. Among his castaway favourites are tracks that epitomise both his youth and getting older. DAVID MCGILLIVRAY

Today the future George IV would not have got away with the teenage advances he made towards his sisters' 23-year-old governess, Mary Hamilton. In the 18th century, such seduction was conducted by letter, which gives York University's Sophie Coulombe full access to each encounter. With the help of author and historian Sally Holloway, curator Polly Putnam and the Fawcett Society's Alesha De-Freitas, she makes a strong case that what has to date mostly been considered an innocent infatuation was actually sexual harassment in the workplace. FIONA HUGHES

TODAY'S CHOICES

Drama: Finding Seaglass 2.15pm Radio 4

In this poetic monologue written and performed by spoken word artist and Edinburgh Makar Hannah Lavery (above) she relates how she is of mixed Burmese, Jamaican, Scottish and English heritage. In fragmented memories and moments of understanding, she looks back at the double loss of her father, who left when she was six and died 25 years later. You feel her pain when she calls him her "occasional dad... the dad with the temper as unexpected and as terrifying as the longed for dad". Born in Scotland and a lifelong Hibs supporter, he had a Jamaican father and so was also "black dad". The theme of belonging, both for her and for him, is bound up with the grief.

FIONA HUGHES

Composer of the Week

12 noon Radio 3

The airwaves will doubtless be thick with avian puns today as "Byrdsong", Radio 3's 12-day 400th-anniversary celebration of English Renaissance master William Byrd, really takes off. First, Essential Classics (9am) hatches out the 56th of the 60 miniature masterpieces it's been playing in its daily "Byrdspotting" slot over the past 11 weeks.

Then Composer of the Week offers a (forgive the pun) byrd's-eye view of the life and career of a composer who somehow managed to remain staunchly Catholic while feathering his nest at the Protestant court.

TODAY'S CHOICES

Mary Anne Hobbs

10.30am 6 Music

There was a time in the mid-Noughties when it was impossible to escape Icelandic band Sigur Ros; Hoppípolla, the ethereal second single from their album Takk, became the go-to soundtrack for nature documentaries, movie trailers and sports highlights. But fans of the minimalist group will know they have a lot more strings to their cello bow, and the band have been busy over the last decade curating playlists, reissuing records on their own label and releasing lost album Odin's Raven Magic. Listeners can expect to hear some of those songs here, as Sigur Ros take to the stage live from Maida Vale studios with the London Contemporary Orchestra. TOM GOULDING

Drama: Requiem

2.15pm Radio 4

It's important to acknowledge that this inspirational drama is rooted in real events. Set in the late 1980s, when the UK was at the start of its towering tombstone, fear-and-prejudice-inducing "Don't Die of Ignorance" public health campaign about the arrival of Aids, it follows the relationship between a newly ordained priest and a young man diagnosed as HIV-positive. The sensitively written story is taken to another level by the choral singing, mix of ancient and modern music, original composition and a thought-provoking poem called Jesus at the Gay Bar by Jay Hulme. ANNA JONES

TODAY'S CHOICES

A Scottish Service of Thanksgiving and Dedication

12.40pm Radio 3
The Honours of Scotland are the oldest crown jewels in Britain – the crown was made for James V of Scotland in 1540, and it was placed on the coffin of Elizabeth II when she laid at rest in St Giles' Cathedral, Edinburgh. Following on from the coronation, today Their Majesties King Charles III and Queen Camilla attend a special service in St Giles', as the King receives the Honours. Radio 3's broadcast begins with a pre-service concert featuring five world premieres, including a new arrangement of Scottish folk songs chosen by the King, and performers including Nicola Benedetti. DAVID CRAWFORD

Ken Bruce: Back to the Start

9.00pm Greatest Hits
It feels appropriate for Ken Bruce to celebrate 75 years of the NHS by focusing on hospital radio. The first time he stepped in a studio was on the Hospital Broadcasting Service Glasgow and he's now a patron of Stoke Mandeville Hospital Radio, so he appreciates the importance of music and chat to patients. In this special, he highlights current hospital DJs and talks to NHS workers about the role of radio in healthcare settings. He also plays the first tunes he spun on hospital radio – requests for Jim Reeves, Elvis and the hymn The Old Rugged Cross. An early lesson in playing what the listener wants. DAVID CRAWFORD

TODAY'S CHOICES

In the Loop

9.00am Radio 4

Whenever the poet Paul Farley visits the 5,000 year-old stone circle at Castlerigg in Cumbria (which he is in the habit of doing), he sees it "as a place to orbit and think – a roundabout of the imagination. And I see it as a roof-less cathedral, making you look upwards to the sky, but also as a centre to earth yourself in." In this lyrical, high-concept, five-part excursion through and round circles in various manifestations, Farley creates a programme that is part travelogue and part philosophical musing, taking in this most symbolically powerful of shapes as it expresses itself at a traffic roundabout, a rollercoaster and a particle accelerator, among other locations. If anyone needs reminding that we are all but a speck in the cosmos, then this is the place to come.

High on the list of the most egregious crimes committed by Islamic State was its attempt in 2014 to wipe out the Yazidis, the ancient Kurdish community most prominent in northern Iraq. The UN reported that more than 5,000 Yazidis were murdered while thousands more, mostly women and children, were abducted and enslaved. Isis was largely defeated by 2019. It comes as a considerable shock to learn in this report from Rachel Wright that, four years on, around 120,000 Yazidis remain trapped in camps for internally displaced people. Conditions are deplorable, and there appear to be few resources for education or employment. The suicide rate is said to be increasing. DAVID MCGILLIVRAY

Drama: Bitter Pill

2.15pm Radio 4 FM

No big demands are made of listeners by this pacy new series set in a world where Alexa-level AI is a fact of life and Big Pharma is a glowering menace. Written by Michael Patrick and Oisín Kearney for BBC Northern Ireland, this first episode opens in noisy, echoing confusion at 3.42am, as Mary (Séainín Brennan) wakes up from another nightmare that has taken her back to the devastating car crash she and fiancé Carl had ten years earlier, which left him in a coma. She has programmed her Alexa-like device to speak with Carl's voice. Sister-in-law Jackie (Charlotte McCurry) is convinced that Mary is suffering from PTSD and, luckily, has been working on a new drug for PTSD at Abacus, a pharmaceuticals company "counting ways to improve your life". What could possibly go wrong? FIONA HUGHES

Radio 3 in Concert

7.30pm Radio 3

The BBC Singers conclude what would have been their last season – had they not been reprieved from summary closure (and even awarded a showcase Prom) as a result of public outcry at the Corporation's proposed cuts – with a midsummer-themed programme of virtuoso a cappella choral works written over the past century or so. Bookended by pieces from a quartet of composers from conductor Sofi Jeannin's native Sweden, the concert also marks 400 years since the publication of the First Folio with a selection of Shakespeare settings – from The Tempest, Twelfth Night and A Midsummer Night's Dream – by Frank Martin, Herbert Murrill and Amy Beach. MARK PAPPENHEIM

There's also new material from both African Head Charge – the project between percussionist Bonjo Iyabinghi Noah and dub producer Adrian Sherwood, evoking a psychedelically travelogue across the landscape of northern Ghana – and Portland pianist Mary Sutton, who delves into her Cherokee roots with a musical evocation of a day in the life of a bear in the Smoky Mountains.

BBC Local Radio

Face behind the voice Jon Wright BBC Radio Suffolk

Age 46
Presents BBC Radio Suffolk's Tuesday Takeover (6pm–10pm), where local groups create programmes that reflect their interests. A disability support group, a Man v Fat football club, a 15th-century battle re-enactment group, an art gallery, a group of farmers, and a group of refugees and asylum-seekers are among those featured. "We give people the space and the freedom to get their point across. It's brilliant seeing how people use the opportunity." The proposed cuts to BBC local radio could spell an end to the programme. "That would be a loss. It's something very valuable that only local radio can deliver."

CV Born in South Africa, where his father was involved in religious training. Moved to the UK aged three, growing up in Newmarket. Studied mechanical engineering at Southampton University, where he worked on the student radio station.

After various jobs, including teaching maths in Ghana for two years, he did a postgraduate course in broadcast journalism at Sheffield University. His first radio job was at Wish FM in Lancashire, newsreading and presenting a sports show. Then he went to Rock FM in Preston, before joining BBC Radio Suffolk in 2006. "I've done pretty much all the jobs across the station," including an award-winning Sunday breakfast show. In 2022 he took up a job at Essex University teaching multi-media journalism. "I've always tried to share my skills. My passion is to get voices on the radio that you wouldn't normally hear."

Social media – yes or no? "Twitter for work, Instagram for fun. I'm fairly boring on social media."

Best moments "When I worked in Preston I volunteered at a community radio station, and did a feature with me and a guest broadcasting from the roof of the famous Preston bus station. We looked out across Preston and told the town's social history. It's stayed in my mind as good, engaging radio."

Worst moment "I ate an oyster live on air while reporting from the Suffolk Show. An ill-judged moment. Listeners were treated to the sound of me nearly being sick, and my colleague collapsing with laughter." Off air "I live in Ipswich, close to the studios, with my wife Anna, our five-year-old daughter and three sons aged nine, ten and 15. There's lots of cycling and eating ice cream."

First radio memory "At school I was engrossed in the silliness of Steve Wright on Radio 1 – his Arnold Schwarzenegger sketches and his Mr Spoons rap."

Favourite broadcasters "Rachel Burden on 5 Live breakfast – so absolutely genuine, so incredibly intelligent across all subjects. She sounds exactly as radio should."

Ambition/Dream job "I'm already doing it. But I guess I've always fancied being a global rock star." Secret skills "I'm not very secret about it but I play the ukulele. I've always played the guitar but the ukulele is a bit more portable. I love it."

BBC Radio Scotland

Face behind the voice Jon Wright BBC Radio Suffolk

Age 46
Presents BBC Radio Suffolk's Tuesday Takeover (6pm–10pm), where local groups create programmes that reflect their interests. A disability support group, a Man v Fat football club, a 15th-century battle re-enactment group, an art gallery, a group of farmers, and a group of refugees and asylum-seekers are among those featured. "We give people the space and the freedom to get their point across. It's brilliant seeing how people use the opportunity." The proposed cuts to BBC local radio could spell an end to the programme. "That would be a loss. It's something very valuable that only local radio can deliver."

CV Born in South Africa, where his father was involved in religious training. Moved to the UK aged three, growing up in Newmarket. Studied mechanical engineering at Southampton University, where he worked on the student radio station.

After various jobs, including teaching maths in Ghana for two years, he did a postgraduate course in broadcast journalism at Sheffield University. His first radio job was at Wish FM in Lancashire, newsreading and presenting a sports show. Then he went to Rock FM in Preston, before joining BBC Radio Suffolk in 2006. "I've done pretty much all the jobs across the station," including an award-winning Sunday breakfast show. In 2022 he took up a job at Essex University teaching multi-media journalism. "I've always tried to share my skills. My passion is to get voices on the radio that you wouldn't normally hear."

Social media – yes or no? "Twitter for work, Instagram for fun. I'm fairly boring on social media."

Best moments "When I worked in Preston I volunteered at a community radio station, and did a feature with me and a guest broadcasting from the roof of the famous Preston bus station. We looked out across Preston and told the town's social history. It's stayed in my mind as good, engaging radio."

Worst moment "I ate an oyster live on air while reporting from the Suffolk Show. An ill-judged moment. Listeners were treated to the sound of me nearly being sick, and my colleague collapsing with laughter."

Off air "I live in Ipswich, close to the studios, with my wife Anna, our five-year-old daughter and three sons aged nine, ten and 15. There's lots of cycling and eating ice cream."

First radio memory "At school I was engrossed in the silliness of Steve Wright on Radio 1 – his Arnold Schwarzenegger sketches and his Mr Spoons rap."

Favourite broadcasters "Rachel Burden on 5 Live breakfast – so absolutely genuine, so incredibly intelligent across all subjects. She sounds exactly as radio should."

Ambition/Dream job "I'm already doing it. But I guess I've always fancied being a global rock star." Secret skills "I'm not very secret about it but I play the ukulele. I've always played the guitar but the ukulele is a bit more portable. I love it."

BBC Radio Ulster

Face behind the voice Jon Wright BBC Radio Suffolk

Age 46
Presents BBC Radio Suffolk's Tuesday Takeover (6pm–10pm), where local groups create programmes that reflect their interests. A disability support group, a Man v Fat football club, a 15th-century battle re-enactment group, an art gallery, a group of farmers, and a group of refugees and asylum-seekers are among those featured. "We give people the space and the freedom to get their point across. It's brilliant seeing how people use the opportunity." The proposed cuts to BBC local radio could spell an end to the programme. "That would be a loss. It's something very valuable that only local radio can deliver."

CV Born in South Africa, where his father was involved in religious training. Moved to the UK aged three, growing up in Newmarket. Studied mechanical engineering at Southampton University, where he worked on the student radio station.

After various jobs, including teaching maths in Ghana for two years, he did a postgraduate course in broadcast journalism at Sheffield University. His first radio job was at Wish FM in Lancashire, newsreading and presenting a sports show. Then he went to Rock FM in Preston, before joining BBC Radio Suffolk in 2006. "I've done pretty much all the jobs across the station," including an award-winning Sunday breakfast show. In 2022 he took up a job at Essex University teaching multi-media journalism. "I've always tried to share my skills. My passion is to get voices on the radio that you wouldn't normally hear."

Social media – yes or no? "Twitter for work, Instagram for fun. I'm fairly boring on social media."

Best moments "When I worked in Preston I volunteered at a community radio station, and did a feature with me and a guest broadcasting from the roof of the famous Preston bus station. We looked out across Preston and told the town's social history. It's stayed in my mind as good, engaging radio."

Worst moment "I ate an oyster live on air while reporting from the Suffolk Show. An ill-judged moment. Listeners were treated to the sound of me nearly being sick, and my colleague collapsing with laughter." Off air "I live in Ipswich, close to the studios, with my wife Anna, our five-year-old daughter and three sons aged nine, ten and 15. There's lots of cycling and eating ice cream." First radio memory "At school I was engrossed in the silliness of Steve Wright on Radio 1 – his Arnold Schwarzenegger sketches and his Mr Spoons rap."

Favourite broadcasters "Rachel Burden on 5 Live breakfast – so absolutely genuine, so incredibly intelligent across all subjects. She sounds exactly as radio should."

Ambition/Dream job "I'm already doing it. But I guess I've always fancied being a global rock star." Secret skills "I'm not very secret about it but I play the ukulele. I've always played the guitar but the ukulele is a bit more portable. I love it." SIMON O'HAGAN

Social media – yes or no? "Twitter for work, Instagram for fun. I'm fairly boring on social media."

Best moments "When I worked in Preston I volunteered at a community radio station, and did a feature with me and a guest broadcasting from the roof of the famous Preston bus station. We looked out across Preston and told the town's social history. It's stayed in my mind as good, engaging radio."

Worst moment "I ate an oyster live on air while reporting from the Suffolk Show. An ill-judged moment. Listeners were treated to the sound of me nearly being sick, and my colleague collapsing with laughter."

Off air "I live in Ipswich, close to the studios, with my wife Anna, our five-year-old daughter and three sons aged nine, ten and 15. There's lots of cycling and eating ice cream."

First radio memory "At school I was engrossed in the silliness of Steve Wright on Radio 1 – his Arnold Schwarzenegger sketches and his Mr Spoons rap."

Favourite broadcasters "Rachel Burden on 5 Live breakfast – so absolutely genuine, so incredibly intelligent across all subjects. She sounds exactly as radio should."

Ambition/Dream job "I'm already doing it. But I guess I've always fancied being a global rock star."

Secret skills "I'm not very secret about it but I play the ukulele. I've always played the guitar but the ukulele is a bit more portable. I love it."

'I WAS TERRIFIED TO GO IN'

The BBC's Fergal Keane spent his life reporting from war zones. Then PTSD kicked in...

Book of the Week: The Madness

Monday–Friday 9.45am, 12.30am Radio 4

FERGAL KEANE is addicted to war. His memoir, The Madness, recounts the BBC foreign correspondent's long struggle with post-traumatic stress disorder (PTSD), a condition triggered by decades of reporting from the front lines of global conflicts. Despite witnessing scenes of unimaginable horror, he felt bound to return, again and again.

In a sense, he has been at war all his life. "I was almost programmed to get PTSD when I went to war, because of earlier experiences," says Keane, 62, in that lyrical Irish brogue familiar from so many BBC broadcasts. He believes his "war compulsion" is rooted in childhood. Raised in Dublin and Cork, he was a deeply anxious boy: "I grew up in an environment full of conflict, on an island where conflict was erupting and where, in my family, we were still hearing narratives of a conflict that happened in the 1920s. The place that I chose to escape to was dreams of being heroic in wars like the one my grandmother [an Irish Republican activist] fought in."

An alcoholic by 21, like his father, Keane got sober more than 20 years ago. By then, however, reporting on conflicts from South Africa to Iraq, Rwanda to Bosnia, had left their mark on him. Keane threw himself into the role of the all-action, testosterone-fuelled war correspondent. He recalls "that rush of adrenaline driving into a township at six in the morning, not knowing what we were going to find. The sense of exceptional energy and control, strangely, that I got in a really sticky situation."

Yet war reporting is a dangerous game, and not just in terms of being shot, kidnapped, or executed. "The danger continues after you come home. It continues into things like addiction, self-medication and despair."

In the book, he writes that going to Rwanda in 1994, to report on the genocide that occurred during the country's civil war, is his "before" and "after". Does he wish he had never gone? "Yeah," he says instantly, and surprisingly. He ponders this. "Yes, I do wish I'd never gone. That's not to diminish the work I and others did, but on a personal level, I do."

Though he has been widely decorated, Keane admits to suffering from imposter syndrome. "There's this paradox: on the one hand, thinking I'm a chancer; and on the other hand thinking I can do this better than anyone else. These two sides of your nature, the insecure and the overconfident, collide with each other."

On a good day, he recognises the value of his work. "There were stories that were important to tell, and I believe I had a way of telling them – and I still have – that can reach people. My issue is with the human cost attached to it. I got to a point where I was terrified every time I went into a conflict zone. The choking anxiety, this conviction that something awful was going to happen – I needed to listen to that voice. The bravado I had when I was younger is done. I certainly wouldn't do it again."

'I get anxious and terrified and my head is like a washing machine'

FERGAL KEANE

MEDICALLY SIGNED OFF from covering any more "hot wars", Keane says work looks different for him nowadays. "The BBC has been amazingly supportive, in terms of giving me the time I need to deal with stuff and putting in place a way of working that can still play to my strengths, but not indulge my addiction to conflict."

In some ways, war is always my subject. The question is to be able to interrogate it without it traumatising me: What do we think foreign news is about? Is it just about being on the frontline? Or is it, for me, touching on the larger themes that create and sustain war: political corruption, failure of governance, authoritarianism?"

In terms of his day-to-day life, the mantra is "no f drama! I start with that. That means getting up and walking the dog. Meditating. It means going to my AA meetings, and talking to people struggling with the same kind of stuff that I struggle with. Having a to-do list and marking things off. I need that. If I sense that things are out of kilter, I can very rapidly start to spiral. I get anxious and terrified and my head is like a washing machine. I just can't live like that again. It's hell."

He is pleased that The Madness has resonated with both colleagues and general readers. "Before publication, I was in a state of dread," he says. "But I've been relieved by the response. Early in my career, I got quite a lot of backlash about 'emotional' reporting. I think we've changed, to a massive degree, in terms of how people acknowledge and express their emotions, and mediate what's happened to them."

Having witnessed so much of the "wretchedness" of conflict, Keane has become "really anti-war as a personal conviction. We have a long journey to reimagine an international order, which has the maintenance of peace at its centre." Peace, as Keane knows, is hard won.

Origins of crime

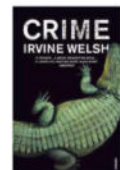

The novels that led to two new TV dramas this week

ROSEANNA
AND PER WAHLÖÖ

Beck Saturday 9.00pm BBC4
Long-running Swedish crime drama Beck returns this week, but the show's history goes back even further than its 1997 debut. It's based on a series of novels first published in the 60s. Written by husband-and-wife team Maj Sjöwall and Per Wahloo, the Martin Beck stories have also enjoyed film and radio adaptations. They shaped Swedish crime writing for years to come – beginning with Roseanna (Fourth Estate, £7.99), a classic example of the well-loved police procedural.

CRIME
IRVINE WELSH

Irvine Welsh's Crime Saturday 10.05pm ITV1 (also on ITVX)
Several of Irvine Welsh's novels have been adapted into films, but Crime (Vintage, £9.99) is the first to be made into a TV series – with the author himself on board, creating more of an origin story than the book's narrative offers. Whereas the ITV show is set in Edinburgh, the book follows Detective Lennox (a minor character in 1998's Filth) after a mental breakdown as he settles in Miami. He takes it upon himself to rescue a young girl from a paedophile ring – an act of redemption for his failure in a child abuse case. RHIANNON THOMAS

ART FIRSTS: THE STORY OF ART IN 30 PIONEERING WORKS
NICK TREND

When was the first self-portrait in art, or nude self-portrait or, for that matter, black self-portrait? You can find the answers in Art Firsts (Laurence King, £16.99), an enlightening and brilliantly readable journey through art from the first kiss (Giotto) via the first orgasm (Caravaggio, of course) to the first abstract (Hilma af Klint's mystical blobs). Rich material for Sky Arts' next hit to follow Portrait Artist of the Year, perhaps? MICHAEL HODGES

I LOVE THE heady fragrance of jasmine. A single plant can fill a small garden with its incredible scent, and if you plant one in your front garden your neighbours and passers-by will probably get a good whiff too and thank you!

The most widely grown jasmine is Jasminum officinale, the common white jasmine with the classic scent. It's hardy in most parts of the UK but, as with all jasmines, does best in a nice sunny protected spot out of the wind. It can get quite bullish (reaching up to 12 metres untamed), so either needs a boundary or decent structure to twine onto (a house wall with trellis or wire, perhaps) or regular pruning to keep within its allotted space (see below).

J. officinale "Inverleith" has the added attraction of deep-pink buds, which open to pure white, and the two-tone combination of masses of buds and flowers at the same time means it looks as good as it smells. A smaller one, my new best friend, is Jasminum officinale "Clotted Cream". It reaches a very useful three metres in height (ideal for a fence, pergola or arch) and pumps out masses of perfume from its creamy yellow flowers, which work nicely against its fresh lime-green foliage.

Jasminum polyanthum ("sweetly scented jasmine") is the one you'll see in a florist's shop, year-round, grown onto a hoop. Its scent is particularly strong and, while it's not reliably hardy, I've known many to be planted out into the garden to live on with some success. They enjoy the microclimate of a town and city garden, where they tend to flower earlier outdoors – around April, when their fragrance is particularly welcome.

The star jasmine, or evergreen jasmine (Trachelospermum jasminoides) has to get a mention as it's such a fabulous, well-behaved evergreen climber (with glossy leaves) and, although it may not technically be a jasmine, it certainly carries the inimitable scent.

GROWING AND PRUNING

Jasmines like plenty of sun and a sheltered spot out of the wind. They can cope with dry soils once they are established, but to get them going add plenty of compost and don't let them dry out for their first year.

The trick to keeping them in check is to prune, once established, after flowering every year. For out-of-control or oversized plants, prune back harder in spring: you'll lose flowers for a year, but that's the way it goes!

Joe's column takes a break for a few weeks now, but he'll be back again in August

HEAVEN SCENT

For a fragrance as divine as their flowers, jasmine is just the job, says Joe Swift

BEGINNER'S GUIDE TO...

Garden lighting

A bit of illumination will increase safety in the garden and extend its use into the evening. But remember, subtle lighting is more atmospheric, considerate and inviting than bright light.

WHICH LIGHTS?

Fixed installed lights get expensive and need an electrician. Here are some other options...

■ Solar lighting

There's a huge range of solar lights that don't require an electrician to install: post lights, spotlights, LED strip lights, deck lights, paving brick lights, moveable lanterns and one-off party lights like festoon, nets and strings to drape over structures and large plants.

■ Candles Tea lights placed in a glass jar (or set in sand) and placed on walls, edges of paths or tables can look very cool for a party. There are fancy products with a big range of lanterns and bowls that will help style the garden as well as providing a light source. Then – because you should never leave naked flames unattended if there are children around – there are those battery-powered imitation flickering candles.

HOW TO HIGHLIGHT?

Avoid glare by always facing the light source towards the object and away from the viewing point. Try these:

■ Spotlighting

Highlight a key plant or feature such as a sculpture/large pot.

■ Uplighting Throw light upwards from ground level onto a tree trunk or into the crown of a large shrub or structure.

■ Grazing Place at an angle to show off a textured surface.

■ Shadowing Light a plant or sculpture from the front to cast a theatrical shadow onto a wall.

Joanna Lumley's Spice Trail Adventure
Wednesday 9.00pm ITV1

ZANZIBAR, MADAGASCAR, INDIA, Indonesia and Jordan... the list sounds evocative enough in anyone's voice, but add Joanna Lumley's breathily seductive tones to the mix and it all gets very spicy indeed. Which is appropriate, because the screen siren and travel aficionado is visiting them all in Joanna Lumley's Spice Trail Adventure, beginning this week on ITV1.

"It's my most epic voyage yet," says Lumley of her 10,000-mile trek in the footsteps of those who brought vanilla, nutmeg, pepper and all those other rich, mysterious flavours to a world waiting hungrily for them. But though undeniably exotic, all those destinations are accessible to ordinary holidaymakers, too. Ready for a taste?

SPICE GIRL

Joanna Lumley sets off on her "most epic voyage yet" in a series that takes her from Indonesia to the Middle East

ON THE WATER
A serene view in Seram, Indonesia

1 INDONESIA NUTMEG AND JAGGER

Lumley's first stop is Indonesia's Banda Islands – microscopically small, but once of huge global significance as the only place on Earth where nutmeg grew. Nutmeg is still harvested there today, and the landscape looks much as it did back when Portuguese sailors returned from the Banda Sea with tantalising tales of jungle-covered, lagoon-wrapped specks of coral sand and palm during the Age of Discovery. Later came celebrity solitude-seekers – including one Mick Jagger – and tourism is still pretty low-key round here: Seram is the nearest "big" (still tiny) island, also nutmeg-scented and rising from a gorgeous coral sea teeming with turtles, and where even today you can find an overwater bungalow for £90 a night. Be ready for a journey, though: Seram is a four-hour flight and 90-minute speedboat from Indonesia's capital, Jakarta.

2 INDIA PEPPER AND GREAT-GRANNY FIGHTING

Pepper might be a common-place now, but it was once so rare and so valuable that it was known as "black gold" and a cornerstone of the wealth of India. Returning to the country of her birth to investigate, Lumley starts in the "lost city" of Hampi, in the state of Karnataka. Here, enigmatic ancient stone monuments – including a never-moving chariot of solid rock that looks a little like something from the Alien films – sprawl over a huge site and date back some 600 years.

After that, Spice Trail Adventure heads south to Kerala, on India's Arabian Sea coast, where 400 miles of exquisite, palm-shaded beaches segue into molasses-slow backwaters. Here, most tourists spend a night or two on a traditional wooden houseboat modelled on the grain barges or spice transports of a few millennia ago – and Lumley meets an 89-year-old great-grandmother who practises and teaches Kalaripayattu, a terrifying traditional martial art involving vicious-looking swords and maces.

3 MADAGASCAR VANILLA AND GOLD DUST

Brave this Indian Ocean republic's infamously pot-holed roads (they rattle even the normally unshakeable Ms Lumley) and you'll find an island full of incredible endemic creatures. There are Coquerel's coua, sickle-billed vangas, white-breasted mesties, grey-headed lovebirds and as many kinds of saucer-eyed lemurs as you can shake a prehensile tail at. And then there's vanilla, the world's second-most expensive spice. Not valuable enough? You can also visit the island's gold-mining communities.

WILD EYED
Ring-tailed lemurs can be spotted in Madagascar

4 ZANZIBAR CINNAMON AND DREAM BEACHES

Watch the lateen-sailed wooden dhow boats tack in and out of Zanzibar's little harbours, and you could still be in the glory days of the Spice Trail, with traders plying the waters between East Africa's Malindi Coast, India's Malabar Coast and Arabia's Red Sea and Persian Gulf. The boats' elegantly curved prows and distinctive shark-fin sails haven't changed much since then, and neither has Zanzibar's role as an entrepôt between those great civilisations – as well as a grower of its own spices, including cinnamon, cardamom, cloves and black pepper.

Stone Town, the little Tanzanian island's ancient "capital", is a bustling melting-pot of all those foreign influences (see it in the architecture, the religion, the music and – yes! – the food), but the beaches of the isle's northern and eastern coasts are a largely unspoilt Indian Ocean fantasia of soft sand and fresh seafood brought straight in on those dhows.

EXOTIC JOURNEY

Joanna Lumley takes in the sights of the Spice Trail

MAJESTIC

5 JORDAN CARDAMOM AND INDIANA JONES

Lumley's journey ends in Jordan, where cardamom is used to flavour everything from coffee to sweets, and where another great trading empire arose as the Nabateans took control of the Silk Road, the Frankincense Road and various maritime routes joining India, Sri Lanka, Zanzibar and Arabia, with Jordan's access to the Gulf of Aqaba crucial. Tourists can enjoy the Red Sea resort city of Aqaba itself, as well as a night or two in the vast echoing desert of Wadi Rum (which has featured in films from Lawrence of Arabia to Star Wars Episode IX: the Rise of Skywalker). This is best experienced, just as Lumley does, from the back of a camel.

But even more magnificent is Petra (also celebrated on the big screen, in Indiana Jones and the Last Crusade): the capital of the Nabateans, it's a desert city carved out of the rose-red sandstone but now a ghost-town of ancient tombs and empty temples. Lumley has her breath taken away, and so will you. ED GRENBY

HOME IMPROVEMENTS ARE ON THE RISE

Could you join the thousands of people unlocking equity for property renovations?

With the cost of moving on the rise, it's perhaps not surprising that more of us are looking to invest in our current property instead – 28% of homeowners who have accessed tax-free cash from their homes this year did so to make renovations, up from 23% in 2022.

If you're a homeowner aged 55 and over, you could fund home improvements by releasing equity. To help you find out more, Radio Times has partnered with Age Partnership+, part of the UK's number one equity release adviser*. Their team will tell you everything you need to know about equity release, including the effect on the amount of inheritance you can leave and if your entitlement to means-tested benefits could be affected now or in the future.

Advice is required before proceeding, and a no-obligation personalised illustration will help you understand how much you could unlock, and the features and risks. Equity release may involve a home reversion plan or lifetime mortgage, which is secured against your property and may reduce the value of your estate and impact funding long-term care. Equity release requires paying off any existing mortgage, and any money released, plus accrued interest would be repaid upon death or moving into long-term care.

Find out more with your FREE Radio Times guide to equity release written by RT's Paul Lewis.

LAST POST FOR OLD STAMPS

Unbarcoded postage stamps are invalid after 31 July so use them up quickly, says Paul Lewis

YOU HAVE UNTIL the end of July to use old postage stamps without a barcode on them. If you use them after 31 July the letter will be treated as unstamped and the person who receives it will have to pay a fee of £2.50 before it will be delivered. The stamps that cannot be used are those with just the late Queen's head on, including the standard 1st and 2nd class stamps for you must use the form and post it.

Enclose the old stamps with the form. Self-adhesive stamps must be left attached to their backing sheet, and stamps with glue on the back must be moistened and stuck to the form. It can only be used for up to £200 of stamps.

Put the form in an envelope and address it simply to FREEPOST SWAP OUT. At the moment there is no deadline to swap your stamps, and you can safely leave it until after the end of July.

'You can change old stamps for new with a Swap Out form' ordinary and large letters as well as any stamps for different values. Commemorative and pictorial stamps and Christmas stamps are not included and can be used after that date.

If you cannot use up your old stamps by 31 July you can change them for new ones: simply download the Royal Mail Swap Out form from royalmail.com – search “swap out” – and print it out (or call 03457 740740). You can also collect the form from any post office, but you cannot swap the stamps there:

THE NEW STAMPS are bigger, and Royal Mail says the barcodes are there to “pave the way for innovative services”. It's not clear what those might be – all you can do at the moment is zap the bar code with your smart phone to watch a Shaun the Sheep video!

Royal Mail has admitted to me that one purpose of the unique barcode is to enable it to detect if a stamp is used more than once. At the moment stamps that have been used but have passed through the system without being franked can be reused without detection. That is illegal and barcodes will help stamp that out.

DICTIONARY CORNER Susie Dent

Word of the week Americanize

American English comes in for a lot of stick on this side of the Atlantic. Its "lazy" spelling is one of our main bugbears – why drop the second "i" from "aluminium", for example, or the "u" from "honour"? And why do some of us think that "realise" needs a "z"? The answer, often, is not as clear cut as you might think. "Honor" is found in Shakespeare's First Folio in 100 more instances than "honour" – it is closer to the Latin honor. The "u" crept in thanks to the Norman Conquerors' honneur. We even called aluminium "aluminum" for a while to match the pattern of elements such as "platinum". As for "realize", the so-called "American" spelling is also the house style of Oxford Dictionaries: "ize" is closer to the Greek from which many such words descend.

LETTER OF THE WEEK

Material for the imagination

I can't agree with Elaine Bradley (Feedback, 24 June) about The Great British Sewing Bee (Wednesday BBC1). The three challenges test different skills – so it's not just about being able to understand patterns and sew, but also about being inventive. Adapting clothes or materials we already have, giving us ideas, however wacky, is just what we need in these difficult times. My sister also loves it and she's 87!

I don't think Sewing Bee is aimed at the "average stitcher", but more to encourage those who can't sew to have a go, not only following a pattern but also using their imagination. It's a great programme that I look forward to every week.

GALLOWS SHAMBLES

Having lived at the eastern end of Yorkshire's Calder Valley all my life, the story of the Cragg Vale Coiners has been part of local folklore. I therefore looked forward to BBC2's The Gallows Pole with considerable interest. The result was, sad to say, a shambles. Setting aside the improvised dialogue, which became increasingly annoying, as did the snail-like pace, the truth is somewhat different to the cosy image of starving villagers driven to crime to survive.

The economic consequences of their actions were bad enough, but having been betrayed by one of their number they murdered the public official sent to investigate, and three of them, including "King" David, were hanged.

Never let the truth get in the way of a good story.
Phil Lyon Halifax, West Yorkshire
The series was based on Benjamin Myers's 2017 "fictionalised" account.

HARROWING DRAMA

The four-part BBC1 drama Best Interests was painfully sad, and beautifully and sympathetically handled a very difficult subject.

There was only ever going to be one conclusion, but how it was reached took us into the minds of each member of the family and through a gruelling court process, giving us some small insight into what is reality for many families.

The acting from Sharon Horgan and the rest of the cast was simply superb. We were at least able to dry our tears at the end of the final episode (20 June), where the family were reunited in their grief and able to begin to rebuild their lives. The BBC at its absolute best.

Hilary Willson Kilgetty, Dyfed

CRASS AND COSTLY

In the second episode of Five-Star Kitchen: Britain's Next Great Chef (15 June C4), the contestants were required to produce what would be the most expensive dish on their putative menu should they win the competition, and to attach a price to it. These prices ran to three or, in one case, four figures.

Against the background of a cost-of-living crisis, surging use of food banks and food inflation, this struck me as crass in the extreme. I noticed also that the programme was immediately followed by a new series of Britain's Most Expensive Houses. Callous, frivolous and insensitive – Channel 4 should be ashamed.

Dennis Joyce

Woodford Green, London
See Jane Garvey, page 17

CARDIFF QUALITY

What a pleasure it was to watch and hear the BBC Cardiff Singer of the World competition (BBC4, BBC2 Wales; also Radio 3). It was a joy to experience fine singing and interpretation from up-and-coming artists, and to wonder who might finally win.

The first-class presenters Petroc Trelawny and Josie d'Arby must certainly not be forgotten, and praise should be given to all connected with the production of this now truly superb international musical event.

Andy Tyler King's Lynn, Norfolk

...At the final (18 June), Mr Aidan Lang, general director of Welsh National Opera, said that in the hands of these talented singers the future of classical music is alive and well.

If this is the case, why did the BBC, outside of Wales, tuck away its transmissions of the rounds at 10pm or even 10.30pm?

BINGEABLE TV

I didn't realise that there was to be a third series of Staged (BBC1/iPlayer/BritBox). What a lovely surprise and I binged the whole lot. Just as haphazard as before, but I loved it. It was a mess, but a great one.

June Davies

Corby, Northamptonshire

SILVER BULLETS

Your correspondent Nigel Fleet (Feedback, 24 June) is wrong about the term "silver bullet" and what it's attributed to. It was the type of bullet used by the Lone Ranger in the 1950s TV programme. Never to kill, but only to wound.

Martyn Miles Witney, Oxfordshire

POLISHED WORK

I absolutely loved Clean It, Fix It (BBC1), coming just after Garden Rescue (another great programme). Tommy Walsh, Asher Edwards and Maxine Dwyer made a lovely team. More, please.

Molly Sherwood Reading, Berkshire
There's no news yet on any new series, but we'll keep you posted.

SHORT OF A SHILLING

I've greatly enjoyed Hidden Treasures of the National Trust (BBC2), but can't be the only one mortified, in the last episode (16 June), by two experts reviewing a Victorian catalogue and confidently asserting that

WORK AND PLAY
Staged's couples:
Michael Sheen and Anna Lundberg, David and Georgia Tennant

a bench had been for sale at £57 when actually it was 57 shillings. They were understandably shocked at how expensive it was.

Surely someone should have saved them from going on national television with that basic error?

Chris Sale Ascot, Berkshire
The National Trust team say: "Thanks for bringing this to our attention and allowing us to review our records. Due to the tight timing of the filming schedule and our joy at discovering the catalogue, we made an oversight with the currency. The amount paid for the bench was 57 shillings rather than pounds."

ANTIDOTE TO WALFORD

It was deliberate juxtaposition, wasn't it, on 19 June on BBC1: EastEnders followed by The Antidepressant Story?

David Turner

Rotherham, South Yorkshire

BOOMER BLAME GAME

With reference to Joe Queenan's Viewpoint on Baby Boomers (RT, 24 June), the decisions that benefited them were made by much earlier generations. The first two prime ministers of that era were Clement Attlee and Winston Churchill, born in 1883 and 1874. The Boomers didn't become prime ministers until the late 1990s, first with Tony Blair and ending very recently with Boris Johnson. Now, perhaps it would be legitimate to blame the Boomers for Blair and Boris.

MELVYN BRAGG

The arts supremo on cancer, culture – and why working-class life isn't miserable

What are you watching, Melvyn?

I've been seeing Carlisle United, my team, beat Stockport County at Wembley recently and go up a division – that was a great moment for television.

What's the mood on the Bragg sofa?

Television is a comfortable medium. It requires very little from you. You don't have to get out in the rain and walk up three streets to go to the cinema. You don't have to put on your best suit and go to the opera. You can just sit in a seat with a tray in front of you, and something to eat. If my wife's making it, then it's quite complicated. If I make it, it's very simple indeed. I'm not going to reveal the extent of what I can get away with, but I'm not a gourmet.

Does trash TV annoy you?

Be careful what you call trash! It is curious how yesterday's trash is tomorrow's good stuff. You can't judge. I'm old enough to remember when people thought pop music was rubbish, but they don't think it's rubbish now.

Apart from TV, is the radio usually on?

Yes. It's a nice conversational accomplice, a radio. You can chatter to it on your own and I do mutter away. I turn it off sometimes, partly because I'm annoyed at the way they're presenting.

Why is it still important to do the South Bank Sky Arts Awards?

They bring together something that's scattered and give it a centre. It's a kind of Cup final of the arts. The arts deserve to be celebrated, encouraged and told, "You're good. This is good."

You have been unwell recently, but you kept working...

Yes, over the last two or three years I've had various cancers. So, it hasn't been any good. I'm getting through it now but it did affect me quite powerfully. One of the things that happens when you have multiple cancers is that you get very tired. It scarcely hurts at all, but you've never been so tired before in your life.

Did it focus your mind?

I did think, "If I've only got time to write one more book, what would it be?" I never thought that before. So, it wasn't a good time in my life. It was hell. I did a book called Back in the Day, which was about my background – white working-class, my generation. I wanted them to be represented. They've always been underestimated and underrepresented.

The BBC is probably to blame for this, because they only want working-class people if they are miserable on their book readings and things, but 70–80 per cent of the population comes from much the same background as I do. They're massively underrepresented, it seems to me, and I want to say, "Look, people like this, they worked so hard. And yet they came up from the mines. They came in from factories. And what did they do? They created a huge culture." That was completely unrecognised. These people are [portrayed] as either miserable, broke or in despair. It wasn't like that – and it needn't be like that.

MY CULTURAL LIFE

ON THE RADIO
Radio 4's Today programme – it sets an agenda.

ON THE BOOKSHELF
A Little History of Poetry by John Carey. More than two millennia of poetry brilliantly represented. It is at once authoritative, concise and captivating.

Is that partly why the South Bank Sky Arts Awards are so important?

Yes. A lot of popular music, ballet dancers, singers and people in drama are from ordinary backgrounds. Talent is really a spark that some people have, but the big thing is, if you can give people opportunity and encouragement, you really are more than halfway there.

Will The South Bank Show and Radio 4's In Our Time be your legacy?

Honestly, I don't think about it in the least. I think about what's going to happen to my [three] children. And if they're OK, that's enough legacy. I've been very lucky. In Our Time is a kind of audio Encyclopaedia Britannica. We're coming up to the 1,000th edition. And they're all in the archive, you can pick them out for nothing, whatever you want, from Chinese art to philosophy – it's all there. A lot of essays are written on the back of that! MICHAEL HODGES

*The South Bank Sky Arts Awards is on Wednesday Sky Arts 10pm. Nearly 1,000 editions of In Our Time are on BBC Sounds*
